American War Casualties Reach Peak

25 Go Down in Airliner

URBANA, OHIO (AP) - A DC9 jetliner and a second airplane crashed today 50 miles from the scene of another airliner crash Sunday, the Ohio Highway Patrol said.

The patrol post at nearby Piqua said it was not learned whether the planes might have collided but that two definitely were down. One plane was identified as a Trans World Airlines DC9 with 25 persons aboard. No survivors were reported.

The second plane was identified as a light private plane which crashed two miles from the DC9.

There was no word on the fate of the occupants of the private plane.

The sheriff's office said bodies were scattered amid the debris of the plane which fell near the resort community of Meadow Lake about five miles northwest of this central Ohio city.

R. D. King, news editor of the Urbana Citizen, reported he found no survivors among the 21 passengers and four crew members.

A woman who lives nearby, Mrs. Wayne Rinehart, said she heard "what sounded like an explosion." She said the plane landed about half a mile from her house in a rural area.

Bodies and debris were reported scattered over a four-mile area. A temporary morgue was set up not far from the crash.

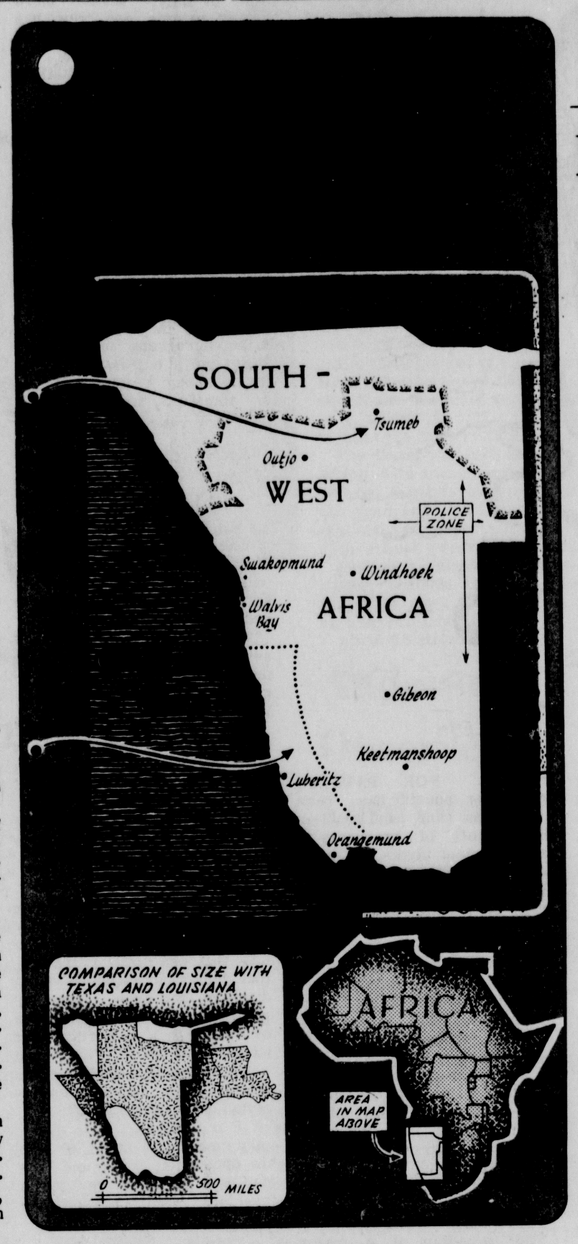

In Washington, a spokesman for TWA identified the crew members as Capt. Karl Kohlsaat, First Officer Donald Binder, and hostesses Linda Wilds, and C. Andrews, all based in Chicago.

TWA in Chicago identifed the plane as Flight 553, which goes from New York to Chicago with a stop at Dayton, about 30 miles to the south. TWA said, the 70-passenger plane had 25 aboard.

The crash scene was identified as not far from the Urbana Airport, which does not have regular airline service.

TWA said the plane had left New York's LaGuardia field with stops in Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, Pa., en route to Dayton.

On Sunday night, a Lake Central Airlines Convair 580-a-turboprop plane crashed near Kenton, killing all 38 persons aboard. Civil Aeronautics Board investigators were still probing that wreckage when they received reports of the new crash.

Battle for South-West Africa

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - South-West Africa, the territory the United Nations wants to take from South Africa, is bigger than Texas and Louisiana put together, but has fewer people than Memphis.

It cannot produce enough food for its own needs, but it produces a large part of the world's persian lamb pelts and gem diamonds.

South Africa seized South-West Africa from Germany in 1915, during the first World War, and in 1920 was given a League of Nations mandate to run the territory. After World War II, South Africa refused to follow the lead of other nations and put its mandated territory into the United Nations trusteeship system.

Last Oct. 27, the U.N. General Assembly found that South Africa had abused the mandate by disregarding "the moral and material well-being and security" of the natives. It declared the mandate terminated and said South-West Africa henceforth was a U.N. responsibility.

The Assembly decided to hold a special session starting in April on how to administer the territory and bring it to independence. A special committee was set up to make recommendations on the subject. But South Africa has denounced the action, and the outcome is uncertain.

South-West Africa is bounded by South Africa, Botswana, Angola and the Atlantic Ocean. Its area is 318,261 square miles, compared with Texas and Louisiana's 315,862. Its population at the 1960 census was 526,004, compared with Memphis' 527,492.

At that time there were 450,540 nonwhites and 75,464 whites in the population. Among the nonwhites tribal Negroes outnumber mixed bloods about 20 to 1. Some of the whites are descended from the original German settlers but most of them are from South Africa, and among the latter Afrikaaners (of Dutch origin) outnumber those of English origin.

Most of the nonwhites live on reserves in the northern third of the country. Nearly all the whites live in what is called the police zone in the southern two-thirds, but even there they are far fewer than the nonwhites.

The territory is dry like the southwestern United States. It has to import food and other consumer goods, largely from South Africa. But it raises lots of livestock.

South-West Africa is the world's largest producer of karakul sheep, whose pelts are sold under the name of Persian lamb. It averages 2.5 million of the 4.5 to 5 million pelts marketed yearly.

The karakul sheep thrive on the hot, dry scrubland. They are raised mainly on white-owned farms, 2,000 to 5,000 to a farm. The pelts are auctioned in London at prices ranging up to $11 apiece. Six out of 10 go to the West German garment industry. Many are sold to the United States.

In a normal year the territory will have up to 2.8 million karakul sheep and up to 2.5 million beef and dairy cattle. Many of the cattle are exported to South Africa.

There is commercial fishing in the Atlantic. Sardines (or pilchards) are caught near Walvis Bay and to the north. Rock lobsters are pulled from the sea bottom near Luderitz. Both are exported.

South-West Africa is second only to South Africa in the production of gem diamonds. It is sixth in the production of diamonds of

Reuther Bucks Defiant Strickers

DETROIT (AP) - President Walter P. Reuther of the United Auto Workers struggled today with the problem of a rebellious union local in Ohio that defied officials and struck a General Motors plant for the second time in 16 days.

Reuther sought a method to enforce a trusteeship he slapped on UAW Local 549 after workers failed to report to their jobs Wednesday night at the GM's strategic Mansfield, Ohio, plant.

The company said about 850 of 1,200 men today reported for the day shift.

Wednesday night, however, some 90 per cent of the 300 workers on the overnight shift failed to report, indicating that the rebellion had its strongest backing on that shift.

The strike threat appeared momentarily ended Wednesday when day shift workers reported after a walkout by men on the overnight shift.

Some 1,500 of the local's 2,600 members voted to strike Wednesday night.

Mrs. Copeland Heads Easter Seal Campaign

NEW MADRID -- Mrs. Bess Copeland will serve as the 1967 county Easter Seal campaign chairman. She has been active in Easter Seal work since 1958.

The campaign is conducted annually to raise funds for the treatment and rehabilitation of physically handicapped children and adults.

Mrs. Copeland announces that Mrs. Martha Anderson, Miss Jeannette Haubold, Mrs. Larry Gardner, Mrs. Johnnie Copeland, Miss Gloria Parrish and Mrs. Glenn Dyke will assist in the Feb. 20-March 26 drive.

Only $988.75 was raised during the 1966 campaign. "It was necessary," Mrs. Copeland said, "to call upon the state Easter Seal office for $998 in emergency funds so we would not be forced to turn away any of those persons seeking help."

The goal for 1967 is $1,500.

According to Mrs. Copeland society assistance can be made available to a family within an hour.

Mrs. Copeland pointed out that Easter Seal services vary according to community needs, but all county Easter Seal societies in the state retain at least 70 per cent of their campaign funds for direct services in the county.

Those who did not receive letters may send their contributions to New Madrid County Easter Seal Society; % Bank of New Madrid, New Madrid, Mo. 63869.

Driver Fights Police

A Sikeston man who was observed driving at a high rate of speed early today was charged with five offenses, before he was released on a bond of $584 to appear in city court Friday.

David Joe Ford, 28, route two, Sikeston, was charged with driving while intoxicated, resisting arrest, assaulting a police officer, destruction of private property and speeding.

He was stopped by officer James Sindle on East Malone in Miner. Ford began fighting and tore the officer's badge, name plate, whistle and the shirt of his uniform, Sindle said.

Sindle reported that he had to hit Ford with his slapper and pull his gun on him before he stopped fighting.

Sindle said Ford broke loose from him after he had handcuffed Ford's left hand. Ford then struck the officer with the handcuffs.

Sindle reported he then drew his gun on Ford, finished handcuffing him and brought him to the police station. Ford threatened to kill Sindle if he got loose on the way to the police station, police reported.

In other police activity, Marjorie Ann Gregory, 34, Bloomfield, was charged Wednesday on West Malone with excessive speed, resisting arrest and destruction of city property. Police said she attempted to jump from the police car after she was arrested. She also broke out a window in the women's cell at the police station, police, reported.

William Nicholson, Jr., 30, 332 Luther, was charged by police today with automobile theft in connection with the theft of a 1962 black Ford from the Sikeston Motor Co. last week. Hugh "Jake" Ayers, Dexter, was charged with auto theft in connection with stealing the same car Saturday. Arresting officer Kenneth West said police had been looking for Nicholson for the past week.

A break - in was reported to police Wednesday at the Airport School. About $70 was reported stolen from desks and vending machines at building five of the Airport School.

No signs of forcible entry was found at the building, police said. Desks throughout the building were ransacked. The theft was reported by Alvin Fields, 327 Petty, the school principal.

Filing Deadline Near

The deadline for candidate filing for the one city council post in the April 4, city election expires at noon Saturday, City Clerk John Vaughn said today.

All councilmen serve at large rather than by wards. Any qualified resident of Sikeston may file.

The three - year term of Arthur B. Ziegenhorn expires April 4. He has refiled. Hugh T. McCollum, 502 Benton, has filed for the position.

Unless a third person files a primary election will not be required, Vaughn, noted.

James Clark, 215 Luther, has sent a letter to the city clerk stating that he wants to file but has not paid his filing fee of $1 or proved his qualifications, Vaughn said.

To qualify a person must have no unpaid taxes, be a legal voter and pay his filing fee.

If a primary election is required, it will be held March 21.

The number of registered voters in Sikeston is estimated to exceed 7,000, based on the Nov. 8 general election, Vaughn said.

The registration book is being reviewed now to eliminate persons, who have not voted in the last two primary or general elections and deceased, Vaughn said.

Absentee voters may be cast at the city administration office about 10 days prior to the election.

House Passes Bill to Create Scholarships

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House today passed a bill creating 800 college scholarships each year for superior students of limited financial means.

Each scholarship would be for $500.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Charles A. Sheehan, D-House Springs.

Rep. Robert O. Snyder, R-Kirkwood, argued against the bill on grounds that it is not constitutional.

"Passing laws because we want to help education and students is not responsible legislation when contrary to the constitution," he said.

Those in favor of the bill compared it with the GI education bill following World War II.

A new constitutional amendment was introduced in the House today that would limit the House to 75 members. The resolution was introduced by Rep. Harry E. Hatcher, R-Neosho.

It would provide for an apportionment committee to draw the districts for the 75 members. The House now has 163 members.

Another new bill would set up a department of administration in Jackson County. The department would handle the administrative functions of the Jackson County court.

Meanwhile the Senate advanced a bill that would raise the salary of the chief state highway engineer from $19,500 to a maximum of $25,000.

The bill also removes limitations on other top jobs in the department. The commission had testified it was losing trained professional engineers, lawyers and other personnel at the present statutory limits.

A bill to prevent Missouri employers from importing "goons" as strikebreakers won House committee approval Wednesday night.

Employers could hire other workers during a strike, but not professional strikebreakers.

A bill for a state minimum wage of $1.25 an hour met stiff opposition in the House Labor Committee. Members of the state motel and restaurant associations were the principal opponents.

They charged many marginal operators would be ruined.

John I. Rollings, president of the State Labor Council (AFL-CIO), said 20 per cent of Missouri's working people get less than $3,000 a year — the so-called "poverty level."

A bill to require the processing date of milk to be placed on milk cartons also cleared a House committee.

A Senate committee approved a modified "truth in lending" bill after cutting out a forfeiture clause which had run into heated opposition.

Also approved were bills to increase St. Louis police salaries by about $1.1 million a year and let St. Louis use parking meter revenues to build a parking garage near Kiel auditorium.

Hunter Phillips, chairman of the State Tax Commission, opposed a bill to transfer collection of the private car tax from his agency to the Department of Revenue.

He said the tax commission had information about railroads that would not be available to the revenue department and the shift would cost the state money. No action was taken on the bill.

Eight Bands Attend Festival

The annual spring band festival yesterday brought out eight bands for an all - day practice session, followed by a concert last night in the National Guard armory.

The event was sponsored by the eastern division of the Southeast Missouri band association.

The daytime practice session included eight bands which were directed individually by Robert E. Restemeyer, band director of Southeast Missouri State College. After each session he cited ways each band might improve.

A large crowd was present for the concert last night with the bands from East Prairie, Oran, Scott County Central, Kelly, New Madrid and three bands from Sikeston, participating.

Keith Collins, Sikeston high school band director, was chairman of the festival.

Future Business Leaders To Honor Boy and Girl

The Southeast Missouri district convention of Future Business Leaders of America will be held Saturday at the high school.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the administration building.

The meeting will open at 9 a.m. with a talk presented by Joel Montgomery, a member of the board of advisors to the Sikeston chapter of the Future Business Leaders.

Winners in district competition will enter state competition in May at St. Louis. Winners in state competition will attend the national convention in June in San Francisco.

Displays and tours of businesses will be available to visitors.

The Sikeston chapter has a membership of 40 high school students. The students have made a study of business and industry in Sikeston through the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and businessmen.

Information gathered in the study will be used in displays to be shown Saturday.

Judges for the competition will be: Lela Martin, representing the National Secretarial Association, for spelling; Fielding Potashnick and Phil Nash, public speaking, and Pat Lea, parliamentary procedure.

Larry Allen and Mrs. Gladys Stewart, employment office counselors will interview candidates for outstanding boy and girl.

Weekly Toll Climbs Over 1,600 Mark

SAIGON (AP) — The highest American losses of the Vietnam war were announced today, reflecting the steadily rising U.S. military effort and Communist retaliation with heavier mortar attacks, mines, booby traps and hit and run assaults.

The total casualties last week were 1,617 killed, wounded and missing. It included 232 dead, 1,381 wounded and four missing. Most were in the small skirmishes and fleeting Red jabs that have characterized the recent fighting.

While the over-all total was the highest of the war, the total of 232 killed was exceeded by one week in November, 1965, when 240 Americans died. But most of that death toll came in the fierce Ia Drang Valley battle, not in engagements scattered the length of South Vietnam.

By unofficial tabulation, American combat losses in the war up to last Saturday midnight were 7,920 killed and 45,836 wounded.

The U.S. Command reported 1,736 Communists were killed last week, well above average but not a record. However, South Vietnam's "open arms" program to attract defectors dealt the Reds a hard blow. A record weekly total of 1,168 Communist soldiers and political workers came into allied lines waving the slips of paper granting them amnesty for turning on the Reds.

Another sign of the stepped-up war was the lifting of security wraps on the first major offensive operation in the Mekong Delta by troops of the U.S. 9th Infantry Division, the first big U.S. ground unit to be permanently assigned to that vital area which contains about one third of South Vietnam's 15 million people and grows 80 per cent of its rice.

The division's 3rd Brigade arrived at Dong Tam, about 40 miles southwest of Saigon, in late January and has been digging in. The U.S. Command announced that more than 1,500 men of the brigade began sweeping the surrounding Viet Cong-infested paddy land two days ago in Operation Palm Beach.

In a series of skirmishes, the brigade has killed 42 Viet Cong in the operation, a U.S. spokesman said. Communist retaliation cost the brigade nine dead and four wounded in ground combat and two dead and 10 wounded when the Reds mortared the Dong Tam camp Wednesday.

The brigade's security sweep signals the beginning of stepped-up U.S. efforts in the delta, where 100 or more U.S. Navy small craft are also stationed to sweep into the narrow waterways with supporting fire. Three South Vietnamese divisions have borne the brunt of the fighting in the delta until now.

The U.S. Command also announced that American military forces in Vietnam now total 417,400 - an increase of 2,400 last week -- enabling Gen. William C. Westmoreland currently to keep 15 ground sweeps going at one time.

The biggest of these is Operation Junction City in which some 45,000 ground, air, communications, supply and other personnel have uncovered a mountain of Red supplies, bunkers and documents but relatively few enemy troops in Communist war Zone C near the Cambodian border. One U.S. soldier was killed there Wednesday, 21 were wounded and an American helicopter was forced down by ground fire.

The heaviest U.S. losses Thursday were reported from the mountains of coastal Phu Yen Province when a guerrilla force smashed a platoon position of the 4th Infantry Division.

Of the U.S. force of about 45 men, 13 were killed, 27 were wounded and three were missing. Reports to the Saigon command center lacked detail, but a mechanized force of infantrymen was in pursuit of the attacking Reds, who pulled back after smashing into the patrol perimeter for two hours with satchel charges and grenades.

Heavy weather again was reported over North Vietnam Wednesday, but the daily communique said Red supply lines and communications were still hit by 90 missions, involving some 270 planes.

The Navy stepped up its offshore bombardment, sending the cruiser Canberra and five destroyers to harass North

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

FOR THE BIRDS - AND OTHER CREATURES

The three-day 32nd North American Wildlife and Natural Resources Conference opens in San Francisco on Monday (March 13).

The human environment. The phrase keeps recurring more frequently. The words indicate a growing awareness among the general public of a thesis long held by conservationists that man should preserve wildlife and wilderness areas not for sentimental or scientific reasons but for his own basic good, his own needs.

Various wild creatures making a last fight for survival include the whooping crane, polar bear, grizzly bear, ivory-billed woodpecker, California condor, New Caledonia cagou, and American bald eagle. Few people know or care that the Arabian oryx (a small antelope) is virtually extinct, but everyone knows about the whooping cranes and is rooting for their survival.

The news is both good and bad. We lost a whooper last year. There are now only 44, by government count. But that's still more than the total population of 26 adults and 6 young in 1963.

The news about bald eagles is bad. It is feared that insecticides are killing them off or rendering them sterile. On the other hand, the condor, another of this country's rarest species and the largest - 10 feet from wingtip - appears to be making a comeback. According to the California Department of Fish and Game, the count this year was 51, as against 38 individuals last year. Inasmuch as the fierce condor does not exactly imitate the mink in the reproduction department, that has to be pretty good going.

Significantly, the theme of the Wildlife Management Institute's conference in San Francisco in mid-March will be "Human Needs and Environmental Limits." Many of the nearly 50 speakers on the three-day program will suggest or describe solutions to the ever-present pressures of population growth upon resources and the quality of the human environment. Others will discuss resources, research findings and management developments.

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall recently pointed out: "The seemingly irreversible trend in the world today...is toward more and more human beings, lumped together in ever-widening urban clusters...Efforts to feed and clothe this surging population, together with the downright arithmetic of the space it must occupy simply to exist, impose a growing threat to wild areas and animals which remain."

Everybody knows about the dodo, but the classic example of extinction in modern times was that of the passenger pigeon. That bird was unbelievably prolific. John James Audubon estimated that one flight which he witnessed contained well over one billion pigeons. The birds passed over him for hours on end in sun-darkening planes, layer upon layer.

The birds were good to eat. Professional hunters amassed huge profits from pigeons sent by rail to major towns and cities. Firing at a flock on the wing with both barrels of a shotgun often brought down more than 100 birds. The annual slaughter of tens of millions of birds spelled out the tragedy. By the early 1900s the few remaining wild specimens had disappeared.

The lessons of conservation are best dramatized, it seems, by stories of birds. Theodore Roosevelt once wrote: "When I hear of the destruction of a species, I feel just as if all the works of some great author had perished; as if we had lost all, instead of only part, of Polybius and Livy."

LEARNING THROUGH PLAYING

Retail sales of toys totaled over $2 billion last year. Present emphasis by psychologists on the importance of an early start on life patterns and on the power of play in developing a child's potential may increase the market substantially.

These are among the reasons that a trend toward educational toys is evident at the American Toy Fair, which has begun a two-week stay in three locations in New York City. Between 900 and 1,000 toy manufacturers display their wares at the annual fair, and more than 10,000 buyers - from practically every state and 40 foreign countries - are expected.

Typical of the trend are two new games. One is The Propaganda Game, which teaches youngsters and adults to analyze writing and its emotional impact on the reader. Another, which has been merchandised experimentally at Hess's of Allentown, is an Extra Sensory Perception game created by Kreskin, who describes himself as a mentalist.

Several large corporations are now entering the toy and game industry. With good reason: by 1970 we will have 60 million youngsters under the age of 15 in the United States.

Our congratulations and a thankful appreciation to the Sikeston City Street Department!

They did a magnificent job with the heavy snow on our streets.

We also have noticed how clean our streets are every day now and any number of citizens have told us that they also noticed them.

Can you remember back before the days of City Manager form of government and recall all of the bitching being done about our streets and alleys.

You don't hear anymore about them in a criticizing way.

Thanks, Raymert Miller.

Thanks City Council for letting him do his job.

UNHAPPY FARMERS

The National Farmers Union, which opens a four-day national convention in Oklahoma City on Sunday, March 12, might well ponder the law of supply and demand as it applies to American agriculture. Surplus supplies of most farm products have disappeared, largely because of heavy foreign demand. Such a situation ordinarily would produce higher prices. But then, agriculture is not an ordinary business. Prices received by farmers in the month ending Feb. 15 were 7 per cent below those received in the same period of 1966.

Farmers and cattlemen in the Middle West have reacted in predictable fashion to the agricultural price slump: Many of them have threatened to plow under crops and reduce herds until prices rise. By the same token, farmers understandably are reluctant to take advantage of the increased acreage allotments authorized by Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman. Of every three additional acres authorized by Freeman, it is estimated, only two will be planted in 1967.

Hesitation to expand production may carry over into 1968, even if agricultural prices increase appreciably. Farmers are apprehensive lest new surpluses accumulate, in which case the federal government would be able to manipulate farm prices through surplus disposal programs. The more conservative farmers have long maintained that such programs have the effect of denying a fair return to agricultural producers. It is thought that the National Farmers Union, the most liberal of the major farm organizations, will insist at its convention on some restrictions on government power to dispose of surplus agricultural products.

Hal Boyle

The more a man matures, the more he secretly comes to admire the iron whims of women. Those whims are the real pillars of civilization as we know it.

It is always a shock to a man to find out shortly after the honeymoon is over that the soft, compliant creature he married has a will of unyielding steel.

"I thought my wife would go through life jumping every time I snapped my fingers," he confides to an older married buddy. "She may look like a little bunny, but inside her mind she has got claws like a tiger."

"They all have," replies the marital veteran. "What seems to be your main gripe about your bride?"

"Well, I don't know just how to say it, but she seems to want everything to be perfect."

"They're all that way."

"Every last one of them?"

"Every last one of them. And if you're smart, you'll start getting used to it right now. Otherwise you'll waste the best years of your life fighting her—and still wind up losing."

It is hard for a man to do this. He can't see why his bride gets angry if he comes home an hour late. He can't understand why she is annoyed if a restaurant headwaiter seats them at a table near the kitchen when, after all, the food tastes the same no matter where you sit.

He can't see why she wants to eat at home by candlelight, or why she gets in a blue funk if the new draperies hang an inch or two higher from the floor than she prefers, or why she squawks at the taxi driver if his cab isn't clean, or why she sends his shirts back to the laundry if the collars aren't properly ironed, or why she makes a big issue over half a hundred other matters which seem to him unimportant.

"Why make a war about it?" he asks her wonderingly.

"Because I like things to be done right," she tells him firmly.

Sensibly, for his own peace of mind, he lets her have her way. Dimly, he gradually perceives the chief mental difference between men and women.

It is this:

Man is by nature a lazy compromiser. He is content to put up with second-best arrangements because he thinks it is too much of a nuisance to fight for anything better. Left to his own devices, he would still be carrying a spear in a forgotten forest, sleeping in the rain and scratching his back against the bark of trees.

Woman is made of more durable stuff. For her, life is one long crusade for perfection. She wants things to be not just half right but exactly right—in every detail.

It is only because of woman's pursuit of perfection that railroads and airplanes run on time, napkins are on the table, streets are swept, men shave every day and smell better, and homes have flower gardens.

By being stern over such trifles, step by step she is making a better world for all.

Oh, womankind, onl

higher the percentage of church attendance. The survey finds that 41% of college graduates attend church each week, while only 33% of those with 0-11 years of schooling attend.

Age is also an important factor. Thirty per cent of those 18-24 years never attend church, but 38% of those 65 and over don't attend.

The survey also showed that - as in 1952 - more women than men attend church. In 1966, 42% of the women and 34% of the men go to church every week. In 1952, the percentages were 33% and 29%, respectively.

IS D.C. BURNING? A subcommittee of Congress, investigating the extent and cost of Federal government record keeping, says that if one government record was burned every second, it would take 2,000 years to get rid of all of them. Government paperwork, said the subcommittee, costs $8 billion a year, or $40 per American.

REASON FOR PATENTS

The drug industry has been singled out time and again as the subject of proposals to curtail patent rights. A principal argument in support of such proposals is that there would be an immediate reduction in drug prices. This is indeed a weak argument, since drug prices generally have declined, while inflation has pushed the cost of living to new highs. The need of the drug industry for the patent system is increasing. New regulations introduced in recent years have greatly increased the testing cost of a new pharmaceutical before it can be marketed. The patent system must be permitted to provide protection if investments in increasingly costly research of new drug products are to continue.

The president of a major drug concern as spokesman for the drug industry described in 1961 congressional hearings, what patents mean in the case of his company, and as costs have continued to rise, his statement has greater validity and urgency today than ever before: "The value of patents as a stimulus for discovery is clearly understood by those who deal with the issue not in theory but in terms of actual commitments of their company's resources for research. My company is now investing more than $20 million a year in research and development. I know we could not continue to risk such investments if other manufacturers, domestic and foreign, could share in our discoveries simply by asking, without making any investment in research or any scientific contribution of their own."

The truth of this is easily demonstrated. Since 1941, there have been 366 new drugs introduced in the United States under our strong patent system. In Italy, where there are no patents, one drug has been listed, and in the Soviet Union, where there are no patents, new drug listings are zero.

H.L. Hunt Says

Now Congress has reconvened to tackle the Nation's problems. Chief among them are the war in Vietnam, increasing centralization of power in the federal government, constant assaults on individual freedom, increase in crime, and the threat of inflation.

As for Vietnam, the only rational course to take now is to use such force as is necessary to defeat the enemy or compel him to agree to a just peace. Our troops should have the best weapons available, and the conduct of the war directed by generals and admirals; not by armchair experts.

With growing tendency to concentrate the powers of government in executive agencies and departments in Washington, executive officers increasingly strive to manage the affairs of all men.

Crime has risen forty-six percent while population has grown only eight percent during the past six years. Enough has been done for those who murder and rape and rob. It's time something is done for those who do not wish to be murdered or raped or robbed. Voluntary confessions of self-confessed criminals should be admitted in evidence against them. And there should be laws to promote more adequate procedures for the apprehension and conviction of criminals.

Failure to curb inflation stems from an unwillingness to go to the source of the problem. For years the federal government has pursued a policy of spending more than its income. The remedy is to reduce federal spending. Our elected representatives have their work cut out for them. Let's hope they stay with it. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- It has now leaked out that the Central Intelligence Agency used not only cash under the table but draft deferments to subvert the National Student Association.

The threat of the draft hung heavily over the heads of NSA officers, according to their own admissions behind closed doors, unless they followed the CIA line in their student activities.

The CIA would send an NSA representative to Vietnam, for example, and expect him on his return to oppose the anti-war movement on the campuses.

The draft deferments were obtained through CIA - White House channels until last year when Vice President Humphrey's office made the arrangements.

All this is revealed in detailed, handwritten notes, made available to us, of the NSA's secret staff meetings. The notes were kept by educational director Larry Rubin, who is resigning in protest over NSA's failure to make a clean breast of the CIA affair.

Ed Schwartz, the Vice President in charge of national affairs, brought up the draft question at a staff meeting attended by 30 people on February 9. This was five days before the NSA - CIA controversy hit the headlines. However, the officers knew Ramparts magazine was coming out with the story and were discussing what to do about it.

AGONIZING REAPPRAISAL

"You must understand our bind," said Schwartz. "It is clear now that the CIA has gotten our draft deferments for us in the past. If we blast the CIA in our statements, we will lose our deferments. We can't have an organization without a staff, and we can't have a staff without deferments."

"I THOUGHT YOU SAID THE CIA DID NOT get our deferments for us this year," interrupted Rubin.

"Yes," acknowledged Schwartz, "Phil Sherburne (last year's NSA President) worked it out with Hubert Humphrey, but our information tells us that if we blast the CIA, we'll still lose our deferments."

Schwartz then produced a proposed press statement that admitted next to nothing about the CIA link.

"Dammit, Ed," protested Al Milano, head of the student government information service, "every staff member said we should directly admit to the relationship."

"We're lying," agreed Rubin. "We do know the relationship existed."

Schwartz, noting that some of the deferred staff members were not present, argued: "How can we make decisions that will affect their future?"

At the same meeting, he also confided that the CIA had given up to $5,000, plus credit cards and free travel, to NSA's foreign representatives.

"I used to wonder why the international people lived so high," he said. "Now I know."

He added ruefully that "the CIA doesn't exactly force the caviar down our people's throats."

KATZENBACH TO RESCUE

Groves disclosed that he had been "in communication" with Undersecretary of State Nicholas Katzenbach. There was a "possibility," Groves said, the CIA might be persuaded to make a public admission that it had financed NSA. However, he warned this would mean they could not tell the "whole truth" to the press.

"The staff agreed that no matter what," broke in Rubin from the back of the room, "we want to tell the whole truth."

Then he demanded of Groves: "First, I want to say this to your face: Why did you lie to us about your own knowledge?"

"We had to get Pulvers (NSA representative Roger Pulvers) out of Poland," replied Groves, "before any word was spread that he was CIA-tainted."

"Ed (Schwartz) said he had to lie to protect our money," retorted Rubin. "I want to know about our present complicity."

"Wait, Gene!" broke in Milano. "You've lied to us. We don't want that kind of crap any more."

Groves buried his head in his hands.

"Look," he pleaded, "I really don't know what to say. I won't apologize."

NSA's top officers continued to huddle with the CIA throughout the controversy while they put out statements claiming only incidental ties to the CIA. Indeed, the statements were prepared at the secret meetings which were held at the Marriott Motel and the home of CIA agent Robert Kiley, both in Washington.

When Rubin learned of these meetings, he threatened to resign. Schwartz on February 27 called Rubin into his CIA-carpeted, CIA-furnished office.

"You're a moral puritan, which now makes you a moral pervert," snapped Schwartz. He warned that Rubin's demand for full public disclosure could end up causing NSA staffmen to die in Vietnam.

"If keeping the CIA meetings secret means I'll save one person's deferment," he added, "I'll keep those meeting secret."

Inside Labor

WASHINGTON, D.C.: - If anyone needs 10 locomotives, I can get them for you wholesale. Very cheap. Trouble is they're in Thailand where the Dept. of Defense sent them at a cost of $1 million.

They're standing, virtually useless, on sidings of the Royal State Railway. They've been there for several years now doing a little shunting in one or two yards instead of rushing men and vital cargo along the Thais' northeast mainline to bolster the economy and defenses against the local brand of Viet Cong.

The Thai government truly needed them back in '63. They still don't have those 10 locomotives. The U.S. government is out over a million dollars - absolutely wasted.

New locomotives were ordered to replace the useless engines on August 3, 1965. The new haulers reportedly still are not there.

The loss of over a million dollars resulted from a mix-up in orders under the military assistance program. That puts it charitably.

Actually some of the procurement officers knew the locomotives being sent to Thailand were not what the Thais needed in Bangkok. But, say federal investigators who ripped wide open a credibility gap, the U.S. Army purchasing brass decided to go ahead, order the engines, and ship them some 12,000 miles to Thailand anyway in order to avoid furor over the entire "incident."

So, in the hope that it would all be overlooked, the officers knowingly blew $1 million.

It all would have remained in the archives despite an investigation by the General Accounting Office if angry leaders of several metal trades unions and other government employes' unions whose members are being bumped from jobs by the closing of bases in an economy move had not brought the information to this reporter.

These unionists claim that the GAO discovered wide gaps in the Defense Dept. procurement-management system in this instance and therefore they charge it is reasonable to assume that many more scores of millions are being wasted. These wasted funds, say they, could support some of the military and naval bases now being shut with such loss of jobs and shifting of personnel.

Some of the unionized personnel are sometimes ordered by the Defense Dept. to report to bases 2,500 miles distant within three or four days after they receive notice of base closings. So they are grimly determined to dig deeper into the Defense Dept. procurement system.

The story of the locomotives reads like the script of a Peter Sellers comedy - an expensive one.

Back in 1962, when I was in Bangkok, the Thais decided to swing into action against the encroachments from the Communist infiltrators. They needed railway rolling stock.

They went to the U.S. Army, which in turn, under authority granted in 1957, agreed to supply 10 big locomotives. The Thais indicated they needed 80-ton, 1,200-horsepower Diesels.

Somehow the order went through for 57-ton, 788-horsepower locomotives in 1963.

These arrived in Thailand in August 1963. Official investigations completed this past January disclosed that the procurement officer ignored the Thais' specifications and needs.

A commanding general stated that the "requirement" of the customer (the Thais) had been virtually ignored and that the referral of the purchase description to the office of Commander in Chief, Pacific (CINCPAC) for comment after the award of the contract had been untimely."

Another General concluded that a major cause of the loss had been the failure of the Army officer to sit down in face-to-face meeting with the Thais to insure that all parties understood the requirements.

When the locomotives arrived they turned out to be shunting engines for yards, not long hauls. The engines, furthermore, developed transmission failures, Diesel engine overheating, insufficient power, drive failures, - and they accelerated too slowly and could not maintain speed.

So they were useless for what the Thais wanted and needed. Therefore 10 new engines were ordered on August 3, 1965, at a cost of $2.3 million. As far as can be determined, the new ones still are not there.

So after almost five years, the loss of $1 million, and the loss of face amongst our most devoted allies, the Thais, they still are in dire need of locomotives.

And the labor people now are asking: What of the Defense Dept.'s vaunted efficiency? Why should the federal employes - now losing jobs in city after city - take the rap for the Pentagon's mismanagement?

Eat Needed Milk Supply

KENNETT -- Do you have difficulty in getting your preteen age daughter and son to drink? Don't worry about this skill in bringing up your children. Why not have the family "eat their milk." There are ways to stir nonfat dry milk in main dishes, desserts, drinks, sauces, bread and rolls.

One-third cup of nonfat dry milk with enough water added to make one liquid cup yields 87 calories. This amount of skim milk contains the same amounts of B vitamins, calcium, and protein as whole fluid milk. Whole fluid milk supplies Vitamin A and fat content. One cup of whole fluid milk has 166 calories.

Vitamin A is needed for you to have healthy skin and bright eyes. Should you plan to use mostly non-fat dry milk; plan to use foods high in Vitamin A. These foods are dark-green leafy vegetables and deep-yellow vegetables and fruits.

The extension bulletin "Using Nonfat Dry Milk" is free upon request from your University Extension Center. The whipped topping recipe is economical and easily prepared. (1) Combine 1/2 cup nonfat dry milk and 1/2 cup ice water. (2) Beat as rapidly as possible until soft peaks form. (If using an electric mixer, beat at high speed 3 to 4 minutes.) Add 2 to 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Beat until stiff and fold in 1/4 cup sugar. This recipe makes 3 cups. For whipped fruit topping substitute either chilled cherry, apricot, orange, or pineapple juice for ice water and use only one tablespoon lemon juice. This may be used instead of whipped cream in salads and desserts. When used as a garnish for desserts, plan to use within one hour.

Cooky mix, cornbread mix, brownie mix, vanilla pudding mix and variations and white sauce mix are included the tasty recipes of this bulletin. You not only save time and energy by using non-fat dry milk mixes but they are economical.

Nonfat dry milk is easy to store. It should be tightly sealed and stored in a dry place. Nonfat dry milk is easy to measure, dissolves instantly and may be added to recipes in dry form. When whipping egg white or gelatin, nonfat dry milk may be added in dry form. It may also be used with potato water for whipped potatoes. Another way to eat your milk is mixing it in cereals while being cooked.

Nonfat dry milk is convenient for hikes, picnics, camping, and to have on hand for emergencies. It is an ingredient in many of the mixes found on the market. One of the reasons it is less expensive than whole fluid milk is the cut in cost of transportation and needs to refrigeration. When unopened the shelf life of nonfat milk is four to six weeks.

Eat your milk and enjoy the food. Mrs. Cook plan to get the amounts needed by member of your family; 3 cups for children, 4 cups for teenagers, and two for adults. Have you tried using one-half whole fluid milk and one-half nonfat dry milk mixed for beverages?

Lettuce Crop Is Excellent

NEW YORK (AP)—Let them eat lettuce.

Lots of it.

That is the plea of farmers in California's Imperial Valley and Arizona's adjoining Yuma Valley.

The weather has been ideal, the crop excellent, and green leaves are piling up in supermarkets at low prices.

It is good news for everyone but the farmer, and points up one of the problems of food prices.

The 800 lettuce growers in the Imperial Valley may lose $21 million on the crop, estimates the Western Growers Association in Los Angeles.

Lettuce currently is selling for about 4 cents a head or $1 a carton harvested, trimmed, packed and delivered to shipping points. The association estimates growers must make $1.75 just to break even.

More than 1,000 acres have been abandoned without a head being cut.

"It is time the house wife was told bluntly that she can't expect food to be cheap while the cost of raising, processing and selling it keeps going up," said Robert L. Gibson, president of the California Canners and Growers.

"I have yet to see a consumers' picket line in front of an automobile dealership or a clothing store or a ski lift."

The militant national farmers organization is trying to bring meat and milk supplies more closely into balance with demand, urging members to sell bred cows and sows.

If it works, the number of calves and pigs this spring may be cut sharply enough to raise meat prices this fall. Milk supplies also may be withheld in the months ahead.

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I am 13 and have a twin sister who is five minutes older than I am. Just because she is older she thinks she can boss me around. We have a beautiful bedroom and I keep all my clothes nice and neat so I can bring my friends in to play records. Half the time I cannot do this because my sister's clothes are all over the bed, which isn't even made. She also has the nerve to want to wear some of my clothes because they look neater than hers. I think she is old enough to pick up after herself. She is setting a pattern for how she will keep house when she gets married. What can be done about this?—DEBBIE

DEAR DEBBIE—What does your mother say and do about your sister's untidiness? Many sisters have this problem so I am sure we will get many good suggestions for you. Watch for them.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—My Pointer is to help Mrs. G.L.B. break her little boy's habit of eating toilet soap. A bottle of mildly hot-tasting liquid for the nails of children who bite their nails is quite inexpensive. A few drops of this on the soap every day for about a week will tingle his little tongue just enough to discourage his future soap snacks. He may cry a little but the liquid is perfectly harmless.—MRS. T. L. V.

DEAR POLLY—I can remember what mom used to do to lick the problem of us kids biting a chunk out of a soap bar. She put the soap in a cover she crocheted to look like a turtle. No more soap-eating and more fun in the tub. Also a terry cloth cover could be stitched up to hold the soap. Have either an elastic or a drawstring at the top opening where the soap goes in.—KATHY

DEAR POLLY—When my aunt was in the hospital I noticed that when the nurse's aid came in to rub her back with alcohol some of the cold alcohol always splashed on my aunt when the nurse poured it out of the bottle. I took two empty roll-on deodorant bottles, cleaned them thoroughly and filled them with alcohol. They worked beautifully and the nurses were very pleased. The job was quicker and not so wasteful.—MRS. J. J. W.

KEEP BASEMENT DRY AFTER THAW WITH A SUMP PUMP

Winter is usually fun for the kiddies, but for most grown-ups it's irksome at best. Transportation becomes snarled. Grocery shopping is inconvenient. Schools close down after every heavy snowfall, and children are constantly underfoot or tracking the nasty white stuff in and out of the house.

But the thaw that follows a heavy snow can be even more of a problem -- and mighty expensive if it means flooding in a basement that's been converted into a utility room, recreation area or workshop for dad.

The basement should be protected against flooding at all times, not only to prevent damage to valuable equipment but also for health reasons, the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau points out. One way to do it is with a sump pump or cellar drainer.

The pump is installed in a pit or sump at a convenient spot. When water in the pit reaches a predetermined level, a float switch automatically activates the pump. It continues to operate until all the water has been drained out, when it shuts off automatically.

Basement flooding can result not only from snow thaws but also from heavy rains, broken water mains and even plumbed-in appliances. A sump pump can solve most flooding problems. It comes in different types and sizes, and homeowners with flooding problems should consult a plumbing contractor on the right choice of equipment.

Jays Fall in State Tourney

Lindbergh's Faerber Brothers Dominate Game

BY RON JAYNES

ST. LOUIS - What advantage do signs have on a basketball game? Well...One would think not any...that is toward the game, but last night at Washington University field house where the quarterfinal round of the Missouri class L basketball tournament was held... one sign stood out among all of the 17 strung from the balcony...that one read "Sic 'em George"....That phrase only meant the Flyers' All-Stater from last season, George Faerber.

The Flyers and Faerber smashed Charleston's defense and corraled its offense in taking a 77-46 victory that ended the Jays' victory streak at 19 and stretched their own to 19.

George wasted little time in proving to the Charleston fans and others in the gymnasium that he is considered one of the best players in the state.

As the 6-4, 215-pound postman opened the game he got the tip and then hit a six-foot shot to start the scoring and send him on his way to 25 points and 23 rebounds.

The Charleston quintet was bidding for its 20th consecutive victory, its 24th triumph and its first state tournament semi-final berth in the history of the school.

Lindbergh had no weak spots. If they had the Blue Jays failed to spot them as the Jays tried everything to stop the Flyers' scoring machine. Coach Gary Wadlington said: "We used a man to man, we doubled and triple-teamed him, used a zone and we still couldn't stop him."

Two negative factors defeated the Jays, their shooting and their rebounding. Lindbergh hit 29 of 68 field goals and pulled 59 rebounds while Charleston connected on 17 of 58 and collected only 31 rebounds.

Both squads opened with a man to man defense with Charleston sagging back off the guards on big George.

As the game opened, each squad exchanged baskets until George hit a bucket with 2:11 left in the first period and drew a foul that he hit for an 11-8 lead. The Flyers never trailed again.

Faerber continued to draw fouls as Charleston was forced to come out on the guards after Jim Gannaway hit three straight buckets from 20 feet out, when they came out George went in and sent his team into a 15-8 first period lead.

Somewhat surprising to Charleston fans was that Lindbergh possessed good speed and used a fast break against the Jays in the second period that caught them flat footed. The performance sent the Flyers into an early 21-16 lead with 3:51 remaining in the half.

Three obstacles Charleston had to overcome when the second half started were planted in everyone's mind. (1) The Jays needed to rebound if they were to win, (2) They needed to get back on defense and (3) perhaps the most unlikely of all, was to stop big George...

After a timeout with a little more than two minutes to go in the period, three buckets by Charleston's Betts cut a 27-18 lead to 27-24 at the half. Betts hit three 25 footers to put his team back in the game as the Flyers seemed to be pulling away.

Halftime statistics showed Charleston hitting on only 12 of 31 field goal attempts while Lindbergh hit 10 of 29 and the Flyers scored on seven of 10 free throws and collected 20 rebounds compared to Charleston's zero for one at the line and 16 rebounds. George had 11 of the Flyers' rebounds at the half and brother, Ken, pulled six. Brown topped the Jays with six and Jones was credited with five.

Charleston had only one free throw opportunity up to the half while Lindbergh was charged with two fouls, one offensive and one defensive. Charleston drew 7 fouls.

The final period was a repeat of the third quarter. Charleston was unable to get back into the ball game and fell back 23 points before putting in subs for the last two minutes and 53 seconds of the game.

Charleston's cheering squad stayed right down to the last second and showed good sportsmanship as it congratulated the players for getting as far as they did.

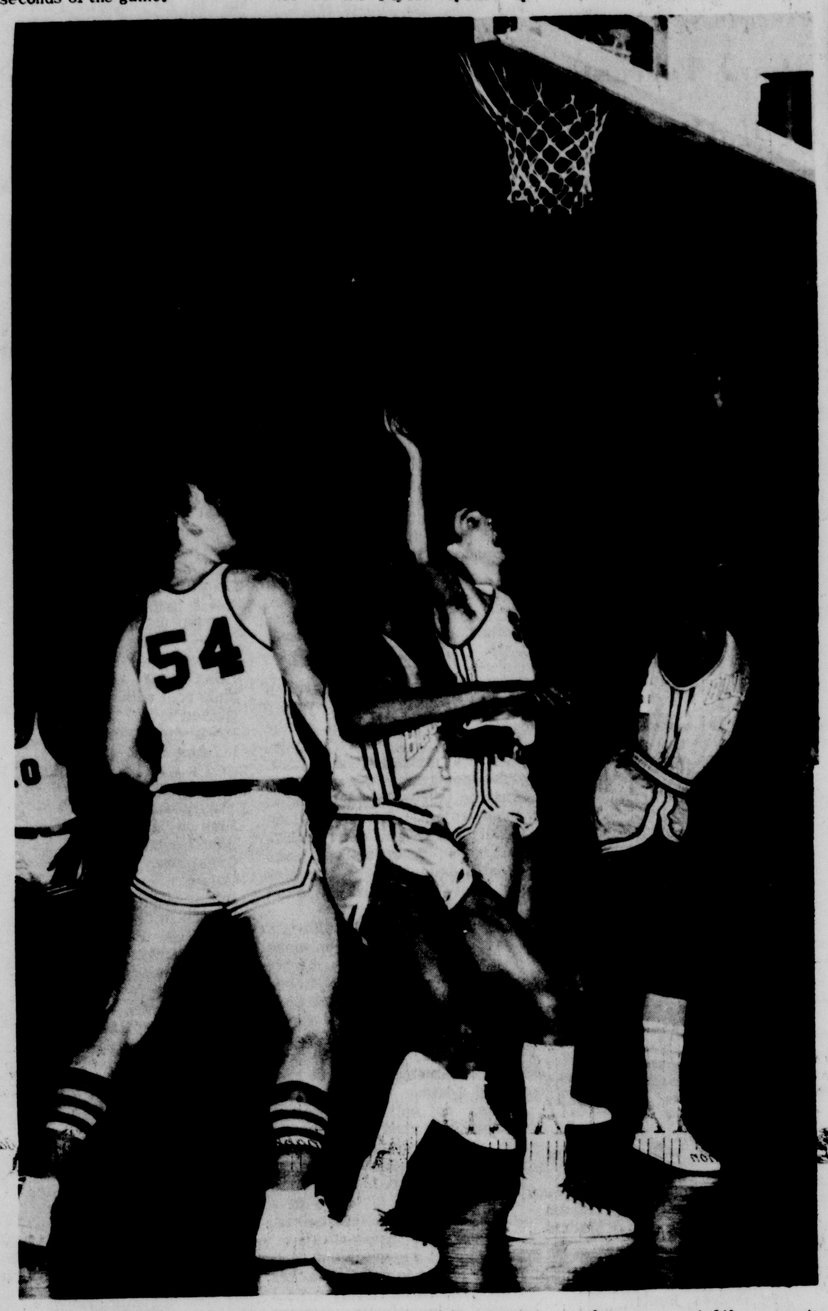

It was just too much Faerber

Things began going for Lindbergh early in the third quarter as the Flyers opened up an 11-point lead, 39-28, in three minutes and 45 seconds. Before one knew it the lead had been extended to 18 points with 27 seconds to go in the period.

Lindbergh's defense tightened and its offense began moving as the brothers combined for 44 points, with George scoring 25 and Ken hitting 19, and 36 rebounds, pulling 23 and 13 respectively.

Ruben Brown and Gary Betts were the Jays' leading scorers. They hit 17 and 16 points.

Westley Unseld Unanimous Choice For All-Mo. Valley

KANSAS CITY (AP) — All America Westley Unseld, top rebounder in the history of the Missouri Valley Conference and best all-around big man ever to play in the league, is the only unanimous choice on the Associated Press 1967 all-conference basketball team.

Unseld was a first-team choice on all 56 ballots.

Six-foot Eldridge Webb of Tulsa, a dangerous scorer and superb playmaker, missed unanimous selection by only three ballots.

Bradley's 6-6 Joe Allen, termed "the best one-legged player in the country" by coach Joe Swank of Tulsa, and Louisville's gifted 6-3 sophomore, Butch Beard, were solid first-team choices with 37 votes apiece.

The fifth spot went to Rubin Russell of North Texas, only senior on the team and a two-time Valley scoring champion. He nudged Wichita's Jamie Thompson by four votes and Wichita's Warren Armstrong by seven.

Unseld is the lone repeater. With his senior year left, the 6-8, 240-pound Louisville native can break almost all the career rebound records.

"Westley is the complete basketball player," says his coach, Peck Hickman. "He does everything very well-rebound shooting, passing and defense. Above all, he is a great team man. He could score 30-35 a game if he wanted to. But he's happy just to get 'em when we need 'em. He's certainly in the same class with Oscar Robertson and Jerry Lucas."

As a 13-year-old eighth grader, Unseld went out for basketball and was cut from the squad after two days. This didn't stop him.

"I decided if my older brother George (later a star at Kansas could do it, then I'd do it, or bust trying," Unseld says.

Webb was ruled scholastically ineligible at mid-term last year.

"Since then Eldridge has completely changed his outlook and attitude," his coach said.

Webb led Tulsa to an NIT bid and a surprise second-place finish.

Allen's left leg carries a lot of scar tissue, but he makes up for it with anticipation of plays, knowledge and concentration. He led the Valley in all-games scoring at 22.8 and in field shooting at .622 and was the No. 5 all-games rebounder with an 11.8 average.

"Joe has more desire than any player I've ever had," said Joe Stowell, the Bradley coach.

Beard survived the tremendous pressure of a pre-season buildup and produced better than a 20-point average. Despite his slim build, he grabbed about eight rebounds a game and improved on defense.

Russell is a deadly gunner who often kept his team in the game with consecutive point sprees ranging up to 17. Opponents set their defenses for him, but he shook loose and helped NTS to its best season in years.

Thompson and Armstrong were joined on the second team by 7-foot Rich Niemann of St. Louis, 6-9 Bob Netolicky of Drake and 6-9 Rick Roberson of Cincinnati.

SIU Opens NIT At New York Against St. Peter's

Associated Press Sports Writer

Southern Illinois and Kentucky Wesleyan, the country's top two small college powers, share the limelight in college basketball tonight with North Carolina, nationally fourth-ranked among the major teams.

Southern Illinois, No. 1 in the final small college Associated Press poll of the season, risks its 15-game winning streak and 20-2 over-all record against St. Peter's of New Jersey in the first round of the National Invitation Tournament in New York. Marshall plays Villanova in the opening game of the NIT doubleheader.

With Southern Illinois preferring to play against major teams in the NIT, Kentucky Wesleyan, 21-3, opens its drive for a second straight NCAA college division national championship.

The Panthers meet Stetson at Evansville, Ind. in the South Central regionals. Kentucky Wesleyan, No. 2 in the final AP small college poll, won the championship last year by defeating Southern Illinois in the final.

North Carolina, 21-4, is pitted against N.C. State in one of four first round games in the Atlantic Coast Conference championship tourney at Greensboro, N.C. South Carolina meets Maryland and Duke battles Virginia in an afternoon doubleheader to open the ACC tourney.

Top-seeded North Carolina and N.C. State meet in the first of a night doubleheader followed by Clemson vs. Wake Forest.

The winner of the ACC gets an automatic berth in the NCAA, unless it is South Carolina, with the runner-up getting the last spot in the 14-team NIT field. South Carolina is on probation and not eligible for post-season NCAA games.

Nebraska was named to the NIT in the only activity involving major teams Wednesday. The Cornhuskers from the Big Eight drew a first-round bye and will play the winner of the Marshall-Villanove game in Monday's quarter-finals.

Long Island qualified for the final in the Northeast regional in the NCAA small college tourney by routing Central Connecticut 114-66 at New Britain, Conn. The Blackbirds will play either St. Michaels, Vt., or Assumption, Mass., Saturday at a site still to be selected.

St. Michael's beat Northeastern 70-61 and Assumption edged American International 87-85 in three overtimes in a doubleheader at Springfield, Mass. St. Michael's and Assumption meet tonight for the right to play Long Island.

Led by Sam Smith, named to the Little All-America this week with Southern Illinois' Walt Frazier, Kentucky Wesleyan is favored to beat Stetson.

In another game at Evansville tonight, South Carolina State meets Tennessee State. The winners play Friday night for the right to compete next week in the NCAA small college wind-up at Evansville.

The quarter-finals are scheduled for March 15, and semifinals March 16 and the championship final March 17.

Six other regionals get under way Friday in the NCAA small college tourney with the winners playing Saturday for the right to compete in the three-day wind-up at Evansville.

This is Friday's schedule:

East at Allentown, Pa. — Philadelphia Textile vs. Wagner and Cheyney State vs. Drexel.

Southwest at Springfield, Mo. — Southwest Missouri vs. Arkansas AM&N and Lincoln, Mo. vs. Arkansas State.

Midwest at Normal, Ill. — Louisiana Tech vs. North Dakota and Parsons vs. Illinois State.

Pacific Coast at San Diego — Portland State vs. San Diego State and Nevada Southern vs. Cal Aggies of Davis.

The NAIA, the other small college national tournament, opens Monday at Kansas City and runs all week with the final March 18. The NAIA pairings have not yet been announced.

DEATH TOLL from diseases of the heart and blood vessels is greater than that from all other diseases and causes in the United States combined. Your Heart Association is the only national voluntary health agency devoted exclusively to fighting these diseases. Its activities are made possible by public contributions to the 1967 Heart Fund, being conducted throughout February.

STARTLED STAR breezing down a modern street is far from the sound of music in Salzburg or a missionary's hut in Hawaii, but she's still unmistakable as one of box office's biggest—Julie Andrews, shown here doing a scene for her latest movie, "Thoroughly Modern Millie."

DESIGN C-2106. Outdoor living is as important as indoor planning here. The big sheltered porch behind the garage is reached from the dining room via sliding glass doors and serves as an outdoor living and dining area for all the fine weather months. An entry from the garage is most convenient for easy storage of folding chairs and barbecue equipment. The kitchen area next to the dining room, is utilized most efficiently for the busy housewife, and the dinette corner will attract the youngsters. Three windows are shown for the master bedroom which also has its own bathroom, backing up to the main bathroom, and there's a vanity alcove just right for a guest lavatory. The two front bedrooms share a closet wall. Square foot area is 1,255 square feet. For information on Design C-2106, write to Illustrated Publications, Inc., 117 West 48th Street, New York 36, N. Y.

IT'S UP TO YOU

By Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

Study for Freedom

Dr. Kershner

WE welcome the opening of the Freedom Study Center in Boston, Virginia about eighty miles southeast of Washington, D. C. The purpose is to turn out graduates "who know as much of the tactics and strategy of communism as prospective admirals know of the tactics and strategy of naval warfare." We are grateful that competent men and women have planned this enterprise and carried it through to a successful beginning. The property consists of 671 acres and an impressive old stone mansion.

It is hoped that those patriots who are planning the studies will put proper emphasis on moral and spiritual values. There can be no freedom without voluntary loyalty to the moral law of God. If men will not follow the moral ideals supremely expressed by the Christian religion, there is no hope of maintaining freedom and free self-government, for the strong will find ways of exploiting the weak, resulting in a master and slave relationship. Unless men adhere voluntarily to the high ethical ideals of truthfulness, honesty, generosity and good will toward others, and refrain from coveting, stealing and mistreating their fellows, free government becomes impossible.

These ideals are taught by the moral codes growing out of religious faith. They lie in the spiritual compartment of the lives of men and women, and they govern their physical actions. Let us never forget William Penn's great words, "If men will not be governed by God then they must be governed by tyrants."

To pacifists and their sympathizers who believe that if we disarm and are good and kind to our implacable foe, communism, he will be won from the error of his way, and will accept peaceable coexistence, we commend a careful consideration of the following quotation from Professor Karl Brandt of the Hoover Institution. Professor Brandt made this statement in an address before the Annual Institute on World Affairs at San Diego, California, August 18, 1966: "If historical experience means anything at all, it gives almost certain assurance (and not the slightest evidence to the contrary) that certain men who have the power to initiate war as the means to expand their orbit of command will do so when they consider the chances favorable, irrespective of the possible risk of total self destruction."

ANOTHER lady governor? Sources in Mississippi say that Mrs. Paul Johnson, wife of the state's governor, may run for the office this year. Like the case of the George Wallaces in Alabama, Johnson is prohibited by law from succeeding himself in Mississippi. Enter Mrs. Johnson, a la Lurleen.

Foreign Policy Viewpoints Reflect Party Differences

(NOTE: This is the fourth in a continuing series of reports on public opinion and attitudes in Missouri. The reports are based on periodic surveys conducted by the Public Opinion Survey Unit of the Research Center, School of Business and Public Administration, University of Missouri, Columbia. Because of careful sampling techniques, findings summarized in these reports accurately represent feelings among the adult Missouri populace.)

COLUMBIA -- The argument is oftentimes made that the United States should present a united front in all its dealings with foreign countries. Some people say that while domestic policy differences are tolerable, the country can ill afford dissension over foreign policy. Others say that while people may express different opinions on foreign policy, once the President and Congress commit the nation to a certain policy, it should be supported whole-heartedly. But critics of these viewpoints claim that, in a democracy, free and open discussion of conflicting policies must be permitted at all times; otherwise, they say, our policies cannot be adjusted to changing world situations.

There has always been considerable pressure for a bipartisan foreign policy in the United States. Critics of the existing foreign policy, particularly when they raise questions about our military commitments, are often held suspect.

Regardless of the attempt to present a united front, popular viewpoints on appropriate foreign policies do differ. Generally these differences appear in regional and party allignments.

In an effort to discover whether such regional and party differences existed in Missouri, the Public Opinion Survey Unit of the University of Missouri asked a sample of nearly 1,000 adult Missourians whether our commitment in a number for foreign policy areas should be "increased, decreased or stay as it is."

Responses are presented in the accompanying table. The closer the figure comes to 1.00, the more an increase is desired. The closer the figure comes to 0.00, the more a decrease in commitment is desired. A score of .50 indicates that the present level of comitment is satisfactory The table presents figures for adult residents of Missouri's ten Congressional districts.

Congressional District	Foreign Aid	Space Program	Vietnam Involvement	Defense Spending
First	.34	.37	.50	.58
Second	.21	.45	.49	.56
Third	.32	.36	.48	.58
Fourth	.27	.32	.51	.54
Fifth	.37	.37	.61	.58
Sixth	.27	.31	.52	.52
Seventh	.22	.20	.47	.53
Eighth	.23	.35	.59	.56
Ninth	.28	.33	.56	.57
Tenth	.33	.31	.50	.54

A nation has several instruments available for conducting its foreign policy. One of these is economic and military aid, or as it is commonly called, "foreign aid." Missourians in all Congressional districts desire a reduction in our foreign aid in the suburban St. Louis 2nd district represented by Richard Ichord, a Democrat.

National prestige is also a tool of foreign policy. Apart from scientific considerations, America's space exploration program is said to involve us in a race for prestige with the Soviet Union. But Missourians in all districts also prefer a reduction in this program. Congressman Hall's 7th district is most opposed to the program, while Congressman Curtis' 2nd district offers the least opposition to it. Perhaps the importance of the space industry to suburban St. Louis' economy is reflected in this vewpoint.

Military power is another important instrument in foreign policy. On this issue Missourians in all districts slightly favor an increase over our present commitment. Regional and party differences on defense spending are almost non-existent, although voters in the urban districts are slightly more inclined to favor increases than are voters in rural districts.

When the issue shifts to the use of military power in a specific area -- Vietnam -- Missourians' viewpoints begin to differ a little bit more. While most districts will settle for the status quo in Viet Nam, Kansas City's 5th district represented by Richard Bolling, a Democrat, and Richard Ichord's 8th district, tend to favor increased military involvement. The other districts hold roughly similar viewpoints regardless of party or region.

Among the general public in Missouri, then, regional and, to a lesser extent, party differences are more pronounced on non-military foreign affairs than on matters of national defense.

Toy Chain Plans Baby Boy Doll

NEW YORK (AP) - A major toy store chain disclosed it would introduce a baby boy doll in the United States. It indicated it expected the anatomically realistic doll to arouse controversy.

"The doll is in no way intended to arouse anxiety," said Frank Caplan, general manager of Creative Playthings, the toy store chain. "We're not trying to shock anyone. We think it will help parents answer a child's questions in a methodical way. We think it is a healthy approach."

The doll, the first of its kind, is a 3-pound, 21-inch sleepy-eyed blond named Little Brother. It comes in a diaper shirt and neither drinks nor wets. It will sell for about $17.

Two of the dolls are tucked away in rainbow-hued boxes under a counter in French exhibit at the 17th International Toy and Trade Fair here this week.

"It will not be officially exhibited because we feel it is one item which has to be promoted here in this country," said a spokesman for the French exhibit.

The doll has been on sale in Europe for about a year.

House Sends Obscene Call Bill Forward

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - The House moved a bill toward passage that would make obscene, harassing and abusing phone calls illegal. The sponsor, Rep. Thomas A. Walsh, D-St. Louis, said that upon complaint of an individual to the phone company the origin of the call could be traced and this would provide a tool for prosecution.

He said the telephone company does not use a listening device and doesn't monitor calls.

"If they did I would never sponsor the bill," Walsh said.

Another bill that moved ahead in the House would set up a Missouri safety commission with members of state department and the legislature serving and in addition would provide for a 12-member advisory board. It was sponsored by Rep. Carl H. Niewhoehner, D-Columbia.

A bill by Rep. Henry Ross, D-Kansas City that would remove the fine provision for conviction of carrying a concealed weapon was moved forward after several attempts to amend it. Ross said "this bill simply provides for time instead of a fine for people convicted."

The minimum term would be 50 days with a maximum of up to five years. Jail time would be automatic.

Rep. James E. Spain, D-Bloomfield, presented a bill to include not-for-profit non-denominational hospitals under the $10,000 memorial grant from the state for construction in addition to county hospitals which are now eligible for the grant.

It was amended to raise the amount to $25,000 for all coming under the provision and moved forward toward passage.

In a second batch of new House bills were ones to:

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LETTERS TO EDITORS
There Is No Peace

Sir:

Americans have never been less united, perhaps, in the history of our wonderful country. The dis-unity that exists is not fundamental; its taproot is in semantics. One illustration of this is seen in the confusion that arises from the changed concept of war and the failure to redefine this term so that all understand the new form it has assumed. The popular notion of war remains armed conflict between sovereign states from which it follows that we are at peace until the shooting starts.

The new concept of war is total. It is not limited to military armaments. It is prosecuted with every conceivable means to defeat and conquer the antagonist. This includes deceit and subversion by corrupting the morals and the morale of a society. These are the acknowledged weapons of our enemy. His leaders have proudly proclaimed this, and there is an accumulation of documented evidence to show that our enemy has been and is employing these weapons against us from without and from within. By his actions, therefore, we are already in war without our consent. When this is recognized and acknowledged we shall cease our deluding discussions about how to maintain the peace and shall be actively at war to restore the peace.

Wars are either won or lost, or end in temporary stalemate. It is difficult to imagine many Americans who would be willing to lose any kind of war. The suspicion insinuates itself, however, that some confuse stalemate with peaceful coexistence and are willing to rest their hopes on this. Our enemy pays lip service to peaceful coexistence as one of his pieces of deceit wherewith to subvert us, but for him stalemate is only an interlude in his war to conquer us. We have his word for it, "We will bury you."

Once the modern concept of war is understood, Americans will be, as always, united on fundamentals. In this unity lies not only our strength to survive but also to lead a weary world to genuine peace, which can result only when "goodwill toward men" is in the ascendancy. But to say "peace, peace," when there is no peace, can end only in disappointment and worse - in subjection to those who love neither our God nor our nation...

THE EDITOR:
DRUGS

The President's recent message to Congress on Consumer Protection failed to offer the American public protection against inefficient, poorly advised and many say, tyrannically oppressive, actions of power-mad federal government regulatory agencies. Many of these agencies have not in the past, and are not currently acting to protect the interests of the consumers, rich or poor, healthy or ill.

May I point out the dismal failure of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to promote the welfare of the sick American. The department's division of Food and Drug Administration has prevented numerous new drugs from reaching the market to cure or relieve the sick, has added materially to the costs of marketing current prescription drugs and has failed to make any of our currently used drugs any safer, any cheaper, or any more efficient in curing or relieving the sick.

Recent ruling of the F.D.A. have effectively blocked the marketing of a cortisone type drug that, rubbed on the skin, relieves inflammatory skin diseases far better than has been possible in years gone by. The generic name of the drug is triamcinolone acetonide powder. The drug was given the name Kenalog Crystals by E. R. Squibb and Sons, the company credited with the original research and development.

In 1961, soon after research development of the basic active drug, Squibb filed a new drug application with the new Food and Drug Administration to release the drug in powdered pure drug form for use in prescription compounding as has been the customary method of releasing a new drug discovery in the past. Unfortunately, the President and Congress permit the F.D.A. to discard past procedures and precedents for recently promulgated (by the F.D.A.) guidelines - represented to have the force of laws. Squibb was notified that the application was rejected as it was not accompanied by adequate proof that Kenalog Crystals were safe, stable, and efficient for compounding under all conditions and in all vehicles. As there are no limits to conditions a new drug may encounter and practically no end to the number and types of vehicles a new drug may be compounded with-the F.D.A.'s requirements are impossible to fulfill or satisfy. Squibb could only withdraw the application - in 1962.

Since 1962 Squibb and Lederle Drug Cos. have placed with the Food and Drug Administration numerous new drug applications containing triamcinolone acetonide powder. More than 20 drug products are on the market with this drug as the active ingredient. Estimating that each new drug application was marketed at an average cost of $5 million (to satisfy the involved testing requirements). $100 million were added to the costs of research and development of this drug before the drug could be widely marketed. (And still the most useful form of the drug for compounding cannot reach the market.

What has this done to consumers of the drug?

The drug has been released in compressed tablets to be swallowed, and in water suspension to be injected, and in a number of ointments, creams, and solutions to be rubbed and sprayed on the skin, and dropped in the eyes. As a result of its release in the water suspension your physician has been ordering the pharmacist to withdraw the wet suspension and compound the drug with any vehicle appropriate to soothe the inflammed linings of his patients. This procedure is a way around the F.D.A.'s ridiculous blocking ruling that the drug can be marketed wet but not dry.

R. C. Martin says:

The American people should never allow themselves to be brain washed by a philosophy that war is an instrument of necessity, and that it should be used as an implement to stimulate lagging economies. Neither is it necessary for social progress.

There can be justification, however stimulating to economies or glorying in victories, to the inhuman, horrifying acts and deeds of war.

Shining victories, won medals though heroic the deed, can never heal the wound nor hide the scares, nor erase the sorry caused by these horrible and unnecessary wars.

If man cannot rise to higher heights and more noble causes then the dedication of total destruction to his fellow creation, God help us all! For at some heated moment someone will trigger the heathenistic temper of some glory-seeking war-monger, then the dust of humanity shall sing among the "Radio Active" ruins of what was supposedly once a civilized world.

We lose our life when we lose our innocence; we are dead when we are guilty; we are in hell when we are in shame. Death does not take a long time to come; it comes in the very day of our sin, "in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

Justification cannot come in the name of justice. Victories cannot be claimed by the number of enemy dead, nor by the amount of American blood that runs down crooked streams, in the far-away war-torn jungles of other nations.

It is my strong feeling that war cannot be justified - war is against the laws of God. God would never put His approval upon this system of mass murder. In the Bible death only came as a judgement and no nation has the authority to judge another nation in this fashion.

In this moment of history when starvation claims more lives than the cruel wars themselves, when millions upon millions of starving human beings are living in slums, a living hell of deprivation of even the barest of necessities, can our world rationally afford this great waste of war?

Can any nation regardless of her natural resources intelligently afford the time, can it afford the cost in human lives, can it afford the hellish decan it afford the hellish devastating destruction that al- of ignorance. I say, acts of ignorance because they are proving nothing more.

No nation can look with pride, at long rows of white crosses and feel justified regardless of its claim on high and noble causes, for in war there is no justification.

The blood of those who lie so silent and still, beneath the white crosses that mark the final resting place, of brave and precious boys and gallant men, would cry out, if it were possible, there is no justification here.

Look, if you will, across bloody battle fields, see what you can. Look hard and long, stand there for a moment an hour if you are brave enough. What do you see? Are you getting sick? How does your heart feel? What is that running down your cheeks? Tears, warm tears of course. You cry out, "my God, can there be justification here!"

Look across "Pearl Harbor" look slowly, see great ships lying half sunk: see those that become solemn tombs for brave American boys. Look into the blue Hawaiian skies, see the enemy planes screaming down dropping death, hell, and destruction; hear the cries of brave men caught in suprise; smell death everywhere. Wait just for a moment. Now, tell me what you think. Is there any justification here? None!

You may search through the writings of all the great men of the world, you may explore the minds of all known philosophers, you may scan diligently through the sacred pages of God's Word, yet honest men can find no justification for these horrible and meaningless acts and deeds of war.

Peaceful hearts long for peace; peace can come, and will come when men are willing to listen to Him who came to give us peace on earth and good will toward men.

Sincerely,
R. C. Martin

MEN WANTED

Of squeamish-minded men
I want to have no part,
And men with priggish views
So niggardly at heart.

Just as they blight all souls.
Of stingy-minded men
My weary heart is tiring;

Great-hearted and inspiring.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE DRAMATIC HUSBAND

Whenever Dave found that he was losing an argument with his wife, he'd dramatically stomp out of the room with the pronouncement that he was going to commit suicide. His mood always determined the mode. He'd either take along a gun to plug himself, or find a rope to choke himself or uncork a bottle to poison himself.

On all such occasions, Dave's wife would follow him out of the room and plead with him not to do anything foolish. That is, except for one occasion when she stayed behind and nonchalantly continued to read a newspaper.

Finding himself in the basement with no one pleading with him, Dave began to tap on a rafter to make sure his wife knew where he was. When it struck him that she had no intention of coming to his rescue, he put down his rifle and dejected went to bed. The next morning, he was rejected. His wife sued to end their marriage on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

His threats of suicide, she complained to the judge, "kept me on edge for years and I can't take it any more."

"Nonsense," was Dave's answer. "I was never cruel to her. I was always very considerate. As for my inclination towards suicide, if I ever carried it out I wouldn't be hurting her, only myself."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you bust the coupling?

This is how the judge ruled: He sided for Dave's wife. In doing so, he held that Dave deliberately impaired his wife's emotional and physical health by repeatedly threatening suicide.

"It was obvious," the judge concluded in effect, "tha Dave would never have commited suicide unless he coul have done it without killing himself."

(Based upon a 1961 Iowa Supreme Court Decision)

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest the tragic and hilarious expressions both for and against the Wall Street Warriors. No one came up with an answer. Not even the great Ann Landers.

I have a practical solution for money-hungry egomaniacs who are too tired for love. I hope that you have enough courage to print it. Today we have Medicare, and here in Wisconsin we are trying Judicare - a plan which entitles the underprivileged to legal aid.

Why not set up a government-supported agency called Sexicare? This agency could relieve the tensions of the overworked husband and the underloved wife. Sexicare would be looked upon not as a recreation, but as a mental measure. Preventive medicine, if you please. No emotional involvement, no guilt, no broken marriages with half-orphaned children and the murderous alimony hook. Just instant relief for the needy.

With someone like you behind the program, Ann Landers, it would be an overnight success - FRIEND OF MANKIND

Dear Friend: When you get a congressman to sponsor this phony bill, let me know. And then we'll talk.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the man who is now 55 and has never enjoyed life because he has always been worried about dying. He blames his father (who was a hypochondriac) and will continue to blame him as long as he lives.

Please, Ann Landers, tell people to quit blaming their parents for their inadequacies and failures. Tell them to accept responsibility for themselves. Most parents make mistakes simply because they are ignorant or fearful. If outside help is needed to face life, people ought to drag their carcasses to the nearest psychiatrist and begin the struggle for maturity and self-understanding.

To sit around and blame one's parents for 55 years is nonsense. Pass this word, will you please? - GROWN UP

Dear Up: Consider it passed. And now may I add a word of my own? We are all the products of our upbringing, but thousands of people rise above poor upbringing and they achieve splendid victories against tremendous odds. If you don't belive me, just look around.

Dear Ann Landers: Please do a million mothers a favor and print something to make American fathers get up during the night when a new baby needs attention.

My husband is very helpful until bedtime, but once he turns in for the night he refuses to get up for anything.

When my last baby was born, my obstetrician told me to take it easy for three weeks. I asked my husband to give the baby her 4:00 A.M. bottle and he said, "I need my rest at night. You can nap during the daytime."

How about an assist from you, Ann Landers? - EXHAUSTED MOM

Dear Exhausted: I'll be in your corner - for three weeks after you come home from the hospital. After that I'm going into your husband's corner.

Some husbands are living dolls about getting up at night - and lucky is the wife whose husband is a willing nocturnal helper. But a woman CAN nap during the daytime if she must. If a man needs an uninterrupted night's sleep to function properly, he should have it.

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What to Expect from Marriage," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"Seek not the favor of the multitude; it is seldom got by honest and lawful means."
-- Immanuel Kant.

The Prayer From The Upper Room

Let your minds be remade, and your whole nature thus transformed. (Romans 12:2, NEB)

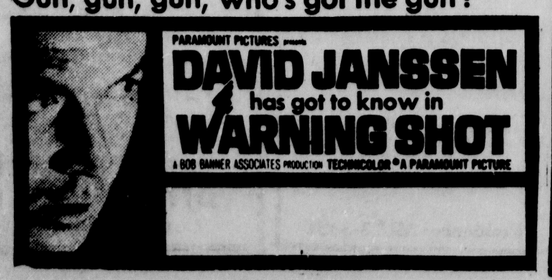

PRAYER: How grateful we are to Thee, our heavenly Father, that Thou dost love all humanity regardless of race, creed, color or station in life. We are thankful for the power of the gospel and its redeeming effect in our hearts and on our behavior. Unworthy though we are, we pray for Thy mercy, through Jesus Christ, Thy Son, our Savior. Amen.

Today In U.S. History

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Thursday, March 9, the 68th day of 1967. There are 297 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1862, during the Civil War, the Union ironclad "Monitor" met the Confederate ironclad, "Virginia," better known as the "Merrimac" near Hampton Roads, Va. They fired at each other for hours, their shells damaging but not piercing the armor plate. Finally, the "Virginia," seeing no hope for victory, broke contact and sailed away.

On this date

In 1796, Napoleon Bonaparte married Josephine.

In 1943, the Royal Air Force bombed Munich, Germany.

Ten years ago — President Dwight D. Eisenhower signed a Senate - revised version of the Eisenhower doctrine for the Middle East.

Five years ago —A coal mine explosion in Meesen, West Germany, took the lives of 31 miners.

One year ago —Disregarding a warning from President Johnson, France said it was going ahead with plans to pull out of the military command structure of NATO.

FRESH air and innocence are good if you don't take too much of them - but I always remember that most of the achievements and pleasures of life are in bad air.
Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

all kinds, and gem diamonds make up 90 per cent of its production. Diamonds are mined in a concession along the coast northward from Orangemund and recovered from gravel dredged up from the sea bottom.

At Tsumeb in the north, U.S. interests run one of the largest base metal mines in the world. The territory exports a lot of lead, copper, zinc and vanadium. But taxes do not cover all its budget, and South African subsidy is necessary.

A white-only legislative assembly levies the taxes and adopts the budget. A long-established mixed-blood community called the Basters of the Rehoboth Gebiet has local self-government. Other mixed bloods have an advisory council working with the South African territorial administrator.

South Africa retains control of defense, foreign affairs, police and many other matters and has almost absolute authority over the native reserves. State President Charles Robberts Swart has the title of paramount chief of all the Africans in the territory and can move them around at will.

Vietnamese coastal installations in one of the most active days since the Navy began hitting land targets in the North on Feb. 26.

Although the ships sliced close to the coast for attacks all along the southern panhandle of North Vietnam, no coastal fire was met and Navy guns bombarded a series of supply points, suspected gun positions and surface - to - air - missile sites.

B52 bombers also maintained the intensified pace with four raids in South Vietnam in the past 24 hours. With each plane unloading some 60,000 pounds of bombs, the giant bombers made raids in four separate provinces.

THE ART OF BEING

The art of being is the assumption that you may possess this very minute, those qualities of spirit and attitudes of mind that make for radiant living.

It is a philosophy of being today, instead of becoming in a tomorrow that never comes.

It is recognizing that courage, joy, serenity, faith, hope and love are immediately available now, and proceeding to open yourself so these qualities can be expressed through you in everyday living.

It is following the maxim of Shakespeare: "Assume a virtue though you have it not"... knowing that the dynamic power of habit can build it into your character.

It is being great now, being forgiving now, being tolerant now, being happy now, being successful now, instead of postponing positive and constructive living to some vague and indefinite future.

It is knowing that when we move into the future it becomes the now, and that now is the appointed time!

It is facing the fact that your biggest task is not to get ahead of others, but to surpass yourself.

It is wasting no time dreaming about the rich life you may live next year, or ten years from now; it is beginning to live at your best right now, today.

It is heeding the wisdom of the ancient Chinese seer who observed: "A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step," and it is taking that step today.

It is beginning today to be the man you want to be.

It is seeking and discovering the acres of diamonds in each day.

It is enlarging the now by pouring into it, intense creative energy.

It is immortalizing the present moment that your life may have eternal significance.

It is coming into a full realization that the Master voiced the secret of victorious being, when He declared that the Kingdom of God is not afar off, but that it is within you now!

Curtis Discounts GOP Role in Coalition

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Thomas B. Curtis says there's a coalition working in Congress, all right, but it isn't the oftencited combine of Republicans and southern Democrats.

Instead, the Missouri Republican told his constituents in a newletter, it is "the Northern Democrat-Southern Democrat coalition, styling itself a political party."

Curtis said the alleged Republican - Southern Democrat coalition is represented as the villain in such matters as failure of a Washington Home Rule bill. But he said Democrats of all varieties united "to re-elect John McMillan of South Carolina chairman of the House District of Columbia Committee, graveyard of this legislation, and stacked the committee with a ration of 10 Southern Democrats to seven non-Southerners."

American War Casualties Reach Peak

25 Go Down in Airliner

URBANA, OHIO (AP) - A DC9 jetliner and a second airplane crashed today 50 miles from the scene of another airliner crash Sunday, the Ohio Highway Patrol said.

The patrol post at nearby Piqua said it was not learned whether the planes might have collided but that two definitely were down. One plane was identified as a Trans World Airlines DC9 with 25 persons aboard. No survivors were reported.

The second plane was identified as a light private plane which crashed two miles from the DC9.

There was no word on the fate of the occupants of the private plane.

The sheriff's office said bodies were scattered amid the debris of the plane which fell near the resort community of Meadow Lake about five miles northwest of this central Ohio city.

R. D. King, news editor of the Urbana Citizen, reported he found no survivors among the 21 passengers and four crew members.

A woman who lives nearby, Mrs. Wayne Rinehart, said she heard "what sounded like an explosion." She said the plane landed about half a mile from her house in a rural area.

Bodies and debris were reported scattered over a four-mile area. A temporary morgue was set up not far from the crash.

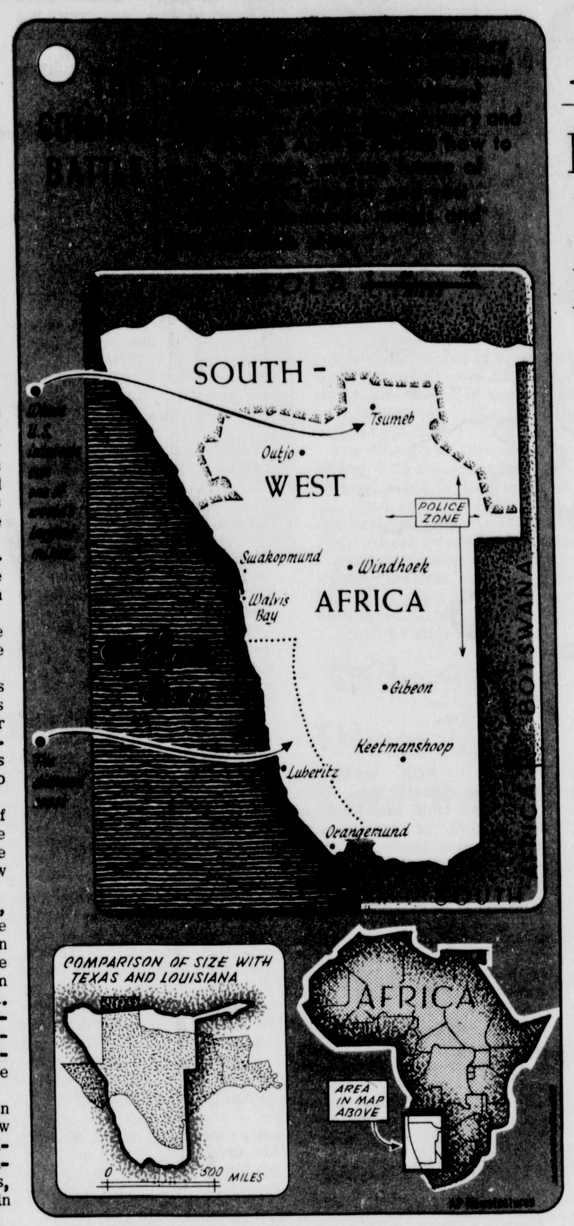

In Washington, a spokesman for TWA identified the crew members as Capt. Karl Kohlsaat, First Officer Donald Binder, and hostesses Linda Wilds, and C. Andrews, all based in Chicago.

TWA in Chicago identifed the plane as Flight 553, which goes from New York to Chicago with a stop at Dayton, about 30 miles to the south. TWA said, the 70-passenger plane had 25 aboard.

The crash scene was identified as not far from the Urbana Airport, which does not have regular airline service.

TWA said the plane had left New York's LaGuardia field with stops in Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, Pa., en route to Dayton.

On Sunday night, a Lake Central Airlines Convair 580-a turboprop plane crashed near Kenton, killing all 38 persons aboard. Civil Aeronautics Board investigators were still probing that wreckage when they received reports of the new crash.

Battle for South-West Africa

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - South-West Africa, the territory the United Nations wants to take from South Africa, is bigger than Texas and Louisiana put together, but has fewer people than Memphis.

It cannot produce enough food for its own needs, but it produces a large part of the world's persian lamb pelts and gem diamonds.

South Africa seized South-West Africa from Germany in 1915, during the first World War, and in 1920 was given a League of Nations mandate to run the territory. After World War II, South Africa refused to follow the lead of other nations and put its mandated territory into the United Nations trusteeship system.

Last Oct. 27, the U.N. General Assembly found that South Africa had abused the mandate by disregarding "the moral and material well-being and security" of the natives. It declared the mandate terminated and said South-West Africa henceforth was a U.N. responsibility.

The Assembly decided to hold a special session starting in April on how to administer the territory and bring it to independence. A special committee was set up to make recommendations on the subject. But South Africa has denounced the action, and the outcome is uncertain.

South-West Africa is bounded by South Africa, Botswana, Angola and the Atlantic Ocean. Its area is 318,261 square miles, compared with Texas and Louisiana's 315,862. Its population at the 1960 census was 526,004, compared with Memphis' 527,492.

At that time there were 450,540 nonwhites and 75,464 whites in the population. Among the nonwhites tribal Negroes outnumber mixed bloods about 20 to 1. Some of the whites are descended from the original German settlers but most of them are from South Africa, and among the latter Afrikaaners (of Dutch origin) outnumber those of English origin.

Most of the nonwhites live on reserves in the northern third of the country. Nearly all the whites live in what is called the police zone in the southern two-thirds, but even there they are far fewer than the nonwhites.

The territory is dry like the southwestern United States. It has to import food and other consumer goods, largely from South Africa. But it raises lots of livestock.

South-West Africa is the world's largest producer of karakul sheep, whose pelts are sold under the name of Persian lamb. It averages 2.5 million of the 4.5 to 5 million pelts marketed yearly.

The karakul sheep thrive on the hot, dry scrubland. They are raised mainly on white-owned farms, 2,000 to 5,000 to a farm. The pelts are auctioned in London at prices ranging up to $11 apiece. Six out of 10 go to the West German garment industry. Many are sold to the United States.

In a normal year the territory will have up to 2.8 million karakul sheep and up to 2.5 million beef and dairy cattle. Many of the cattle are exported to South Africa.

There is commercial fishing in the Atlantic. Sardines (or pilchards) are caught near Walvis Bay and to the north. Rock lobsters are pulled from the sea bottom near Luderitz. Both are exported.

South-West Africa is second only to South Africa in the production of gem diamonds. It is sixth in the production of diamonds of

Reuther Bucks Defiant Strickers

DETROIT (AP) - President Walter P. Reuther of the United Auto Workers struggled today with the problem of a rebellious union local in Ohio that defied officials and struck a General Motors plant for the second time in 16 days.

Reuther sought a method to enforce a trusteeship he slapped on UAW Local 549 after workers failed to report to their jobs Wednesday night at the GM's strategic Mansfield, Ohio, plant.

The company said about 850 of 1,200 men today reported for the day shift.

Wednesday night, however, some 90 per cent of the 300 workers on the overnight shift failed to report, indicating that the rebellion had its strongest backing on that shift.

The strike threat appeared momentarily ended Wednesday when day shift workers reported after a walkout by men on the overnight shift.

Some 1,500 of the local's 2,600 members voted to strike Wednesday night.

Driver Fights Police

A Sikeston man who was observed driving at a high rate of speed early today was charged with five offenses, before he was released on a bond of $584 to appear in city court Friday.

David Joe Ford, 28, route two, Sikeston, was charged with driving while intoxicated, resisting arrest, assaulting a police officer, destruction of private property and speeding.

He was stopped by officer James Sindle on East Malone in Miner. Ford began fighting and tore the officer's badge, name plate, whistle and the shirt of his uniform, Sindle said.

Sindle reported that he had to hit Ford with his slapper and pull his gun on him before he stopped fighting.

Sindle said Ford broke loose from him after he had handcuffed Ford's left hand. Ford then struck the officer with the handcuffs.

Sindle reported he then drew his gun on Ford, finished handcuffing him and brought him to the police station. Ford threatened to kill Sindle if he got loose on the way to the police station, police reported.

In other police activity, Marjorie Ann Gregory, 34, Bloomfield, was charged Wednesday on West Malone with excessive speed, resisting arrest and destruction of city property. Police said she attempted to jump from the police car after she was arrested. She also broke out a window in the women's cell at the police station, police, reported.

Filing Deadline Near

The deadline for candidate filing for the one city council post in the April 4, city election expires at noon Saturday, City Clerk John Vaughn said today.

All councilmen serve at large rather than by wards. Any qualified resident of Sikeston may file.

The three - year term of Arthur B. Ziegenhorn expires April 4. He has refiled. Hugh T. McCollum, 502 Benton, has filed for the position.

Unless a third person files a primary election will not be required, Vaughn, noted.

James Clark, 215 Luther, has sent a letter to the city clerk stating that he wants to file but has not paid his filing fee of $1 or proved his qualifications, Vaughn said.

To qualify a person must have no unpaid taxes, be a legal voter and pay his filing fee.

If a primary election is required, it will be held March 21.

The number of registered voters in Sikeston is estimated to exceed 7,000, based on the Nov. 8 general election, Vaughn said.

The registration book is being reviewed now to eliminate persons, who have not voted in the last two primary or general elections and deceased, Vaughn said.

Absentee voters may be cast at the city administration office about 10 days prior to the election.

He was driving a 1960 Chevrolet south on highway 114 when he pulled on highway 60 into the path of a 1963 Plymouth, driven east by Johnny Fitzgerald, 19, Morley, the highway patrol reported.

Tarrants was thrown from his vehicle to the highway. His body was taken to the Watkins and Sons Funeral Home in Dexter.

House Passes Bill to Create Scholarships

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House today passed a bill creating 800 college scholarships each year for superior students of limited financial means.

Each scholarship would be for $500.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Charles A. Sheehan, D-House Springs.

Rep. Robert O. Snyder, R-Kirkwood, argued against the bill on grounds that it is not constitutional.

"Passing laws because we want to help education and students is not responsible legislation when contrary to the constitution," he said.

Those in favor of the bill compared it with the GI education bill following World War II.

A new constitutional amendment was introduced in the House today that would limit the House to 75 members. The resolution was introduced by Rep. Harry E. Hatcher, R-Neosho.

It would provide for an apportionment committee to draw the districts for the 75 members. The House now has 163 members.

Another new bill would set up a department of administration in Jackson County. The department would handle the administrative functions of the Jackson County court.

Meanwhile the Senate advanced a bill that would raise the salary of the chief state highway engineer from $19,500 to a maximum of $25,000.

The bill also removes limitations on other top jobs in the department. The commission had testified it was losing trained professional engineers, lawyers and other personnel at the present statutory limits.

A bill to prevent Missouri employers from importing "goons" as strikebreakers won House committee approval Wednesday night.

Employers could hire other workers during a strike, but not professional strikebreakers.

A bill for a state minimum wage of $1.25 an hour met stiff opposition in the House Labor Committee. Members of the state motel and restaurant associations were the principal opponents.

They charged many marginal operators would be ruined.

John I. Rollings, president of the State Labor Council (AFL-CIO), said 20 per cent of Missouri's working people get less than $3,000 a year — the so-called "poverty level."

A bill to require the processing date of milk to be placed on milk cartons also cleared a House committee.

A Senate committee approved a modified "truth in lending" bill after cutting out a forfeiture clause which had run into heated opposition.

Also approved were bills to increase St. Louis police salaries by about $1.1 million a year and let St. Louis use parking meter revenues to build a parking garage near Kiel auditorium.

Hunter Phillips, chairman of the State Tax Commission, opposed a bill to transfer collection of the private car tax from his agency to the Department of Revenue.

He said the tax commission had information about railroads that would not be available to the revenue department and the shift would cost the state money. No action was taken on the bill.

Eight Bands Attend Festival

The annual spring band festival yesterday brought out eight bands for an all - day practice session, followed by a concert last night in the National Guard armory.

A large crowd was present for the concert last night with the bands from East Prairie, Oran, Scott County Central, Kelly, New Madrid and three bands from Sikeston, participating.

Keith Collins, Sikeston high school band director, was chairman of the festival.

The Sikeston chapter has a membership of 40 high school students. The students have made a study of business and industry in Sikeston through the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and businessmen.

Information gathered in the study will be used in displays to be shown Saturday.

Judges for the competition will be: Lela Martin, representing the National Secretarial Association, for spelling; Fielding Potashnick and Phil Nash, public speaking, and Pat Lea, parliamentary procedure.

Weekly Toll Climbs Over 1,600 Mark

SAIGON (AP) — The highest American losses of the Vietnam war were announced today, reflecting the steadily rising U.S. military effort and Communist retaliation with heavier mortar attacks, mines, booby traps and hit and run assaults.

The total casualties last week were 1,617 killed, wounded and missing. It included 232 dead, 1,381 wounded and four missing. Most were in the small skirmishes and fleeting Red jabs that have characterized the recent fighting.

While the over-all total was the highest of the war, the total of 232 killed was exceeded by one week in November, 1965, when 240 Americans died. But most of that death toll came in the fierce Ia Drang Valley battle, not in engagements scattered the length of South Vietnam.

By unofficial tabulation, American combat losses in the war up to last Saturday midnight were 7,920 killed and 45,836 wounded.

The U.S. Command reported 1,736 Communists were killed last week, well above average but not a record. However, South Vietnam's "open arms" program to attract defectors dealt the Reds a hard blow. A record weekly total of 1,168 Communist soldiers and political workers came into allied lines waving the slips of paper granting them amnesty for turning on the Reds.

Allied statistics show the open arms program is attracting defectors at twice the rate of last year.

Another sign of the stepped-up war was the lifting of security wraps on the first major offensive operation in the Mekong Delta by troops of the U.S. 9th Infantry Division, the first big U.S. ground unit to be permanently assigned to that vital area which contains about one third of South Vietnam's 15 million people and grows 80 per cent of its rice.

The division's 3rd Brigade arrived at Dong Tam, about 40 miles southwest of Saigon, in late January and has been digging in. The U.S. Command announced that more than 1,500 men of the brigade began sweeping the surrounding Viet Cong-infested paddy land two days ago in Operation Palm Beach.

In a series of skirmishes, the brigade has killed 42 Viet Cong in the operation, a U.S. spokesman said. Communist retaliation cost the brigade nine dead and four wounded in ground combat and two dead and 10 wounded when the Reds mortared the Dong Tam camp Wednesday.

The brigade's security sweep signals the beginning of stepped-up U.S. efforts in the delta, where 100 or more U.S. Navy small craft are also stationed to sweep into the narrow waterways with supporting fire. Three South Vietnamese divisions have borne the brunt of the fighting in the delta until now.

The U.S. Command also announced that American military forces in Vietnam now total 417,400 - an increase of 2,400 last week -- enabling Gen. William C. Westmoreland currently to keep 15 ground sweeps going at one time.

The biggest of these is Operation Junction City in which some 45,000 ground, air, communications, supply and other personnel have uncovered a mountain of Red supplies, bunkers and documents but relatively few enemy troops in Communist war Zone C near the Cambodian border. One U.S. soldier was killed there Wednesday, 21 were wounded and an American helicopter was forced down by ground fire.

The heaviest U.S. losses Thursday were reported from the mountains of coastal Phu Yen Province when a guerrilla force smashed a platoon position of the 4th Infantry Division.

Of the U.S. force of about 45 men, 13 were killed, 27 were wounded and three were missing. Reports to the Saigon command center lacked detail, but a mechanized force of infantrymen was in pursuit of the attacking Reds, who pulled back after smashing into the patrol perimeter for two hours with satchel charges and grenades.

Heavy weather again was reported over North Vietnam Wednesday, but the daily communique said Red supply lines and communications were still hit by 90 missions, involving some 270 planes.

The Navy stepped up its offshore bombardment, sending the cruiser Canberra and five destroyers to harass North

American War Casualties Reach Peak

25 Go Down in Airliner

URBANA, OHIO (AP) - A DC9 jetliner and a second airplane crashed today 50 miles from the scene of another airliner crash Sunday, the Ohio Highway Patrol said.

The patrol post at nearby Piqua said it was not learned whether the planes might have collided but that two definitely were down. One plane was identified as a Trans World Airlines DC9 with 25 persons aboard. No survivors were reported.

The second plane was identified as a light private plane which crashed two miles from the DC9.

There was no word on the fate of the occupants of the private plane.

The sheriff's office said bodies were scattered amid the debris of the plane which fell near the resort community of Meadow Lake about five miles northwest of this central Ohio city.

R. D. King, news editor of the Urbana Citizen, reported he found no survivors among the 21 passengers and four crew members.

A woman who lives nearby, Mrs. Wayne Rinehart, said she heard "what sounded like an explosion." She said the plane landed about half a mile from her house in a rural area.

Bodies and debris were reported scattered over a four-mile area. A temporary morgue was set up not far from the crash.

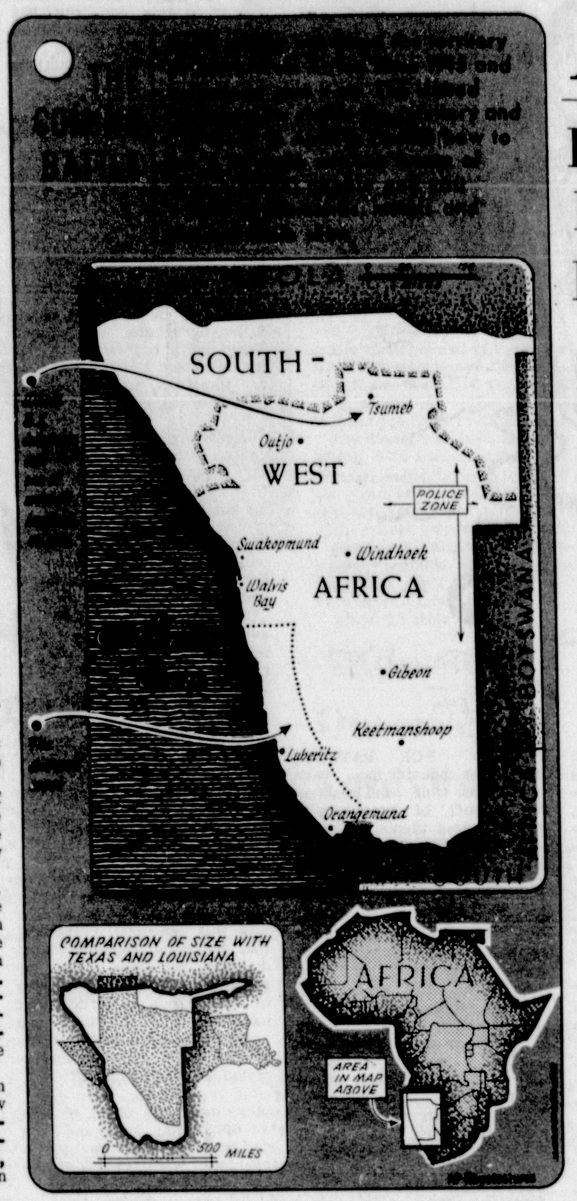

In Washington, a spokesman for TWA identified the crew members as Capt. Karl Kohlsaat, First Officer Donald Binder, and hostesses Linda Wilds, and C. Andrews, all based in Chicago.

TWA in Chicago identifed the plane as Flight 553, which goes from New York to Chicago with a stop at Dayton, about 30 miles to the south. TWA said, the 70-passenger plane had 25 aboard.

The crash scene was identified as not far from the Urbana Airport, which does not have regular airline service.

TWA said the plane had left New York's LaGuardia field with stops in Harrisburg and Pittsburgh, Pa., en route to Dayton.

On Sunday night, a Lake Central Airlines Convair 580-a-turboprop plane crashed near Kenton, killing all 38 persons aboard. Civil Aeronautics Board investigators were still probing that wreckage when they received reports of the new crash.

Battle for South-West Africa

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) - South-West Africa, the territory the United Nations wants to take from South Africa, is bigger than Texas and Louisiana put together, but has fewer people than Memphis.

It cannot produce enough food for its own needs, but it produces a large part of the world's persian lamb pelts and gem diamonds.

South Africa seized South-West Africa from Germany in 1915, during the first World War, and in 1920 was given a League of Nations mandate to run the territory. After World War II, South Africa refused to follow the lead of other nations and put its mandated territory into the United Nations trusteeship system.

Last Oct. 27, the U.N. General Assembly found that South Africa had abused the mandate by disregarding "the moral and material well-being and security" of the natives. It declared the mandate terminated and said South-West Africa henceforth was a U.N. responsibility.

The Assembly decided to hold a special session starting in April on how to administer the territory and bring it to independence. A special committee was set up to make recommendations on the subject. But South Africa has denounced the action, and the outcome is uncertain.

South-West Africa is bounded by South Africa, Botswana, Angola and the Atlantic Ocean. Its area is 318,261 square miles, compared with Texas and Louisiana's 315,862. Its population at the 1960 census was 526,004, compared with Memphis' 527,492.

At that time there were 450,540 nonwhites and 75,464 whites in the population. Among the nonwhites tribal Negroes outnumber mixed bloods about 20 to 1. Some of the whites are descended from the original German settlers but most of them are from South Africa, and among the latter Afrikaaners (of Dutch origin) outnumber those of English origin.

Most of the nonwhites live on reserves in the northern third of the country. Nearly all the whites live in what is called the police zone in the southern two-thirds, but even there they are far fewer than the nonwhites.

The territory is dry like the southwestern United States. It has to import food and other consumer goods, largely from South Africa. But it raises lots of livestock.

South-West Africa is the world's largest producer of karakul sheep, whose pelts are sold under the name of Persian lamb. It averages 2.5 million of the 4.5 to 5 million pelts marketed yearly.

The karakul sheep thrive on the hot, dry scrubland. They are raised mainly on white-owned farms, 2,000 to 5,000 to a farm. The pelts are auctioned in London at prices ranging up to $11 apiece. Six out of 10 go to the West German garment industry. Many are sold to the United States.

In a normal year the territory will have up to 2.8 million karakul sheep and up to 2.5 million beef and dairy cattle. Many of the cattle are exported to South Africa.

There is commercial fishing in the Atlantic. Sardines (or pilchards) are caught near Walvis Bay and to the north. Rock lobsters are pulled from the sea bottom near Luderitz. Both are exported.

South-West Africa is second only to South Africa in the production of gem diamonds. It is sixth in the production of diamonds of

Reuther Bucks Defiant Strickers

DETROIT (AP) - President Walter P. Reuther of the United Auto Workers struggled today with the problem of a rebellious union local in Ohio that defied officials and struck a General Motors plant for the second time in 16 days.

Reuther sought a method to enforce a trusteeship he slapped on UAW Local 549 after workers failed to report to their jobs Wednesday night at the GM's strategic Mansfield, Ohio, plant.

Driver Fights Police

A Sikeston man who was observed driving at a high rate of speed early today was charged with five offenses, before he was released on a bond of $584 to appear in city court Friday.

David Joe Ford, 28, route two, Sikeston, was charged with driving while intoxicated, resisting arrest, assaulting a police officer, destruction of private property and speeding.

He was stopped by officer James Sindle on East Malone in Miner. Ford began fighting and tore the officer's badge, name plate, whistle and the shirt of his uniform, Sindle said.

Sindle reported that he had to hit Ford with his slapper and pull his gun on him before he stopped fighting.

Sindle said Ford broke loose from him after he had handcuffed Ford's left hand. Ford then struck the officer with the handcuffs.

Sindle reported he then drew his gun on Ford, finished handcuffing him and brought him to the police station. Ford threatened to kill Sindle if he got loose on the way to the police station, police reported.

In other police activity, Marjorie Ann Gregory, 34, Bloomfield, was charged Wednesday on West Malone with excessive speed, resisting arrest and destruction of city property. Police said she attempted to jump from the police car after she was arrested. She also broke out a window in the women's cell at the police station, police, reported.

William Nicholson, Jr., 30, 332 Luther, was charged by police today with automobile theft in connection with the theft of a 1962 black Ford from the Sikeston Motor Co. last week. Hugh "Jake" Ayers, Dexter, was charged with auto theft in connection with stealing the same car Saturday. Arresting officer Kenneth West said police had been looking for Nicholson for the past week.

A break - in was reported to police Wednesday at the Airport School. About $70 was reported stolen from desks and vending machines at building five of the Airport School.

No signs of forcible entry was found at the building, police said. Desks throughout the building were ransacked. The theft was reported by Alvin Fields, 327 Petty, the school principal.

Filing Deadline Near

The deadline for candidate filing for the one city council post in the April 4, city election expires at noon Saturday, City Clerk John Vaughn said today.

All councilmen serve at large rather than by wards. Any qualified resident of Sikeston may file.

The three - year term of Arthur B. Ziegenhorn expires April 4. He has refiled. Hugh T. McCollum, 502 Benton, has filed for the position.

Unless a third person files a primary election will not be required, Vaughn, noted.

James Clark, 215 Luther, has sent a letter to the city clerk stating that he wants to file but has not paid his filing fee of $1 or proved his qualifications, Vaughn said.

To qualify a person must have no unpaid taxes, be a legal voter and pay his filing fee.

If a primary election is required, it will be held March 21.

The number of registered voters in Sikeston is estimated to exceed 7,000, based on the Nov. 8 general election, Vaughn said.

The registration book is being reviewed now to eliminate persons, who have not voted in the last two primary or general elections and deceased, Vaughn said.

Absentee voters may be cast at the city administration office about 10 days prior to the election.

Charles Tarrants, 54, Gray Ridge, was pronounced dead on arrival at the Missouri Delta Community hospital following a two-car crash today at 1:10 a.m. at the intersection of highways 114 and 60 near Morehouse.

He was driving a 1960 Chevrolet south on highway 114 when he pulled on highway 60 into the path of a 1963 Plymouth, driven east by Johnny Fitzgerald, 19, Morley, the highway patrol reported.

Tarrants was thrown from his vehicle to the highway. His body was taken to the Watkins and Sons Funeral Home in Dexter.

Fitzgerald had both legs broken. He was taken to the Missouri Delta Community hospital in serious condition.

The lone highway accident in the Sikeston area yesterday occurred at 3:25 p.m. on route 60 at west Dexter city limits.

House Passes Bill to Create Scholarships

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House today passed a bill creating 800 college scholarships each year for superior students of limited financial means.

Each scholarship would be for $500.

The bill was sponsored by Rep. Charles A. Sheehan, D-House Springs.

Rep. Robert O. Snyder, R-Kirkwood, argued against the bill on grounds that it is not constitutional.

"Passing laws because we want to help education and students is not responsible legislation when contrary to the constitution," he said.

Those in favor of the bill compared it with the GI education bill following World War II.

A new constitutional amendment was introduced in the House today that would limit the House to 75 members. The resolution was introduced by Rep. Harry E. Hatcher, R-Neosho.

It would provide for an apportionment committee to draw the districts for the 75 members. The House now has 163 members.

Another new bill would set up a department of administration in Jackson County. The department would handle the administrative functions of the Jackson County court.

Meanwhile the Senate advanced a bill that would raise the salary of the chief state highway engineer from $19,500 to a maximum of $25,000.

The bill also removes limitations on other top jobs in the department. The commission had testified it was losing trained professional engineers, lawyers and other personnel at the present statutory limits.

A bill to prevent Missouri employers from importing "goons" as strikebreakers won House committee approval Wednesday night.

Employers could hire other workers during a strike, but not professional strikebreakers.

A bill for a state minimum wage of $1.25 an hour met stiff opposition in the House Labor Committee. Members of the state motel and restaurant associations were the principal opponents.

They charged many marginal operators would be ruined.

John I. Rollings, president of the State Labor Council (AFL-CIO), said 20 per cent of Missouri's working people get less than $3,000 a year — the so-called "poverty level."

A bill to require the processing date of milk to be placed on milk cartons also cleared a House committee.

A Senate committee approved a modified "truth in lending" bill after cutting out a forfeiture clause which had run into heated opposition.

Also approved were bills to increase St. Louis police salaries by about $1.1 million a year and let St. Louis use parking meter revenues to build a parking garage near Kiel auditorium.

Hunter Phillips, chairman of the State Tax Commission, opposed a bill to transfer collection of the private car tax from his agency to the Department of Revenue.

He said the tax commission had information about railroads that would not be available to the revenue department and the shift would cost the state money. No action was taken on the bill.

Eight Bands Attend Festival

A large crowd was present for the concert last night with the bands from East Prairie, Oran, Scott County Central, Kelly, New Madrid and three bands from Sikeston, participating.

Weekly Toll Climbs Over 1,600 Mark

SAIGON (AP) — The highest American losses of the Vietnam war were announced today, reflecting the steadily rising U.S. military effort and Communist retaliation with heavier mortar attacks, mines, booby traps and hit and run assaults.

The total casualties last week were 1,617 killed, wounded and missing. It included 232 dead, 1,381 wounded and four missing. Most were in the small skirmishes and fleeting Red jabs that have characterized the recent fighting.

While the over-all total was the highest of the war, the total of 232 killed was exceeded by one week in November, 1965, when 240 Americans died. But most of that death toll came in the fierce Ia Drang Valley battle, not in engagements scattered the length of South Vietnam.

By unofficial tabulation, American combat losses in the war up to last Saturday midnight were 7,920 killed and 45,836 wounded.

The U.S. Command reported 1,736 Communists were killed last week, well above average but not a record. However, South Vietnam's "open arms" program to attract defectors dealt the Reds a hard blow. A record weekly total of 1,168 Communist soldiers and political workers came into allied lines waving the slips of paper granting them amnesty for turning on the Reds.

Allied statistics show the open arms program is attracting defectors at twice the rate of last year.

Another sign of the stepped-up war was the lifting of security wraps on the first major offensive operation in the Mekong Delta by troops of the U.S. 9th Infantry Division, the first big U.S. ground unit to be permanently assigned to that vital area which contains about one third of South Vietnam's 15 million people and grows 80 per cent of its rice.

The division's 3rd Brigade arrived at Dong Tam, about 40 miles southwest of Saigon, in late January and has been digging in. The U.S. Command announced that more than 1,500 men of the brigade began sweeping the surrounding Viet Cong-infested paddy land two days ago in Operation Palm Beach.

In a series of skirmishes, the brigade has killed 42 Viet Cong in the operation, a U.S. spokesman said. Communist retaliation cost the brigade nine dead and four wounded in ground combat and two dead and 10 wounded when the Reds mortared the Dong Tam camp Wednesday.

The brigade's security sweep signals the beginning of stepped-up U.S. efforts in the delta, where 100 or more U.S. Navy small craft are also stationed to sweep into the narrow waterways with supporting fire. Three South Vietnamese divisions have borne the brunt of the fighting in the delta until now.

The U.S. Command also announced that American military forces in Vietnam now total 417,400 - an increase of 2,400 last week -- enabling Gen. William C. Westmoreland currently to keep 15 ground sweeps going at one time.

The biggest of these is Operation Junction City in which some 45,000 ground, air, communications, supply and other personnel have uncovered a mountain of Red supplies, bunkers and documents but relatively few enemy troops in Communist war Zone C near the Cambodian border. One U.S. soldier was killed there Wednesday, 21 were wounded and an American helicopter was forced down by ground fire.

The heaviest U.S. losses Thursday were reported from the mountains of coastal Phu Yen Province when a guerrilla force smashed a platoon position of the 4th Infantry Division.

Of the U.S. force of about 45 men, 13 were killed, 27 were wounded and three were missing. Reports to the Saigon command center lacked detail, but a mechanized force of infantrymen was in pursuit of the attacking Reds, who pulled back after smashing into the patrol perimeter for two hours with satchel charges and grenades.

Heavy weather again was reported over North Vietnam Wednesday, but the daily communique said Red supply lines and communications were still hit by 90 missions, involving some 270 planes.

The Navy stepped up its offshore bombardment, sending the cruiser Canberra and five destroyers to harass North

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

FOR THE BIRDS - AND OTHER CREATURES

The three-day 32nd North American Wildlife and Natural Resources Conference opens in San Francisco on Monday (March 13).

The human environment. The phrase keeps recurring more frequently. The words indicate a growing awareness among the general public of a thesis long held by conservationists that man should preserve wildlife and wilderness areas not for sentimental or scientific reasons but for his own basic good, his own needs.

Various wild creatures making a last fight for survival include the whooping crane, polar bear, grizzly bear, ivory-billed woodpecker, California condor, New Caledonia cagou, and American bald eagle. Few people know or care that the Arabian oryx (a small antelope) is virtually extinct, but everyone knows about the whooping cranes and is rooting for their survival.

The news is both good and bad. We lost a whooper last year. There are now only 44, by government count. But that's still more than the total population of 26 adults and 6 young in 1963.

The news about bald eagles is bad. It is feared that insecticides are killing them off or rendering them sterile. On the other hand, the condor, another of this country's rarest species and the largest - 10 feet from wingtip - appears to be making a comeback. According to the California Department of Fish and Game, the count this year was 51, as against 38 individuals last year. Inasmuch as the fierce condor does not exactly imitate the mink in the reproduction department, that has to be pretty good going.

Significantly, the theme of the Wildlife Management Institute's conference in San Francisco in mid-March will be "Human Needs and Environmental Limits." Many of the nearly 50 speakers on the three-day program will suggest or describe solutions to the ever-present pressures of population growth upon resources and the quality of the human environment. Others will discuss resources, research findings and management developments.

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall recently pointed out: "The seemingly irreversible trend in the world today...is toward more and more human beings, lumped together in ever-widening urban clusters...Efforts to feed and clothe this surging population, together with the downright arithmetic of the space it must occupy simply to exist, impose a growing threat to wild areas and animals which remain."

Everybody knows about the dodo, but the classic example of extinction in modern times was that of the passenger pigeon. That bird was unbelievably prolific. John James Audubon estimated that one flight which he witnessed contained well over one billion pigeons. The birds passed over him for hours on end in sun-darkening planes, layer upon layer.

The birds were good to eat. Professional hunters amassed huge profits from pigeons sent by rail to major towns and cities. Firing at a flock on the wing with both barrels of a shotgun often brought down more than 100 birds. The annual slaughter of tens of millions of birds spelled out the tragedy. By the early 1900s the few remaining wild specimens had disappeared.

The lessons of conservation are best dramatized, it seems, by stories of birds. Theodore Roosevelt once wrote: "When I hear of the destruction of a species, I feel just as if all the works of some great author had perished; as if we had lost all, instead of only part, of Polybius and Livy."

LEARNING THROUGH PLAYING

Retail sales of toys totaled over $2 billion last year. Present emphasis by psychologists on the importance of an early start on life patterns and on the power of play in developing a child's potential may increase the market substantially.

These are among the reasons that a trend toward educational toys is evident at the American Toy Fair, which has begun a two-week stay in three locations in New York City. Between 900 and 1,000 toy manufacturers display their wares at the annual fair, and more than 10,000 buyers - from practically every state and 40 foreign countries - are expected.

Typical of the trend are two new games. One is The Propaganda Game, which teaches youngsters and adults to analyze writing and its emotional impact on the reader. Another, which has been merchandised experimentally at Hess's of Allentown, is an Extra Sensory Perception game created by Kreskin, who describes himself as a mentalist.

Several large corporations are now entering the toy and game industry. With good reason: by 1970 we will have 60 million youngsters under the age of 15 in the United States.

Our congratulations and a thankful appreciation to the Sikeston City Street Department!

They did a magnificent job with the heavy snow on our streets.

We also have noticed how clean our streets are every day now and any number of citizens have told us that they also noticed them.

Can you remember back before the days of City Manager form of government and recall all of the bitching being done about our streets and alleys.

You don't hear anymore about them in a criticizing way.

Thanks, Raymert Miller.

Thanks City Council for letting him do his job.

UNHAPPY FARMERS

The National Farmers Union, which opens a four-day national convention in Oklahoma City on Sunday, March 12, might well ponder the law of supply and demand as it applies to American agriculture. Surplus supplies of most farm products have disappeared, largely because of heavy foreign demand. Such a situation ordinarily would produce higher prices. But then, agriculture is not an ordinary business. Prices received by farmers in the month ending Feb. 15 were 7 per cent below those received in the same period of 1966.

Farmers and cattlemen in the Middle West have reacted in predictable fashion to the agricultural price slump: Many of them have threatened to plow under crops and reduce herds until prices rise. By the same token, farmers understandably are reluctant to take advantage of the increased acreage allotments authorized by Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman. Of every three additional acres authorized by Freeman, it is estimated, only two will be planted in 1967.

Hesitation to expand production may carry over into 1968, even if agricultural prices increase appreciably. Farmers are apprehensive lest new surpluses accumulate, in which case the federal government would be able to manipulate farm prices through surplus disposal programs. The more conservative farmers have long maintained that such programs have the effect of denying a fair return to agricultural producers. It is thought that the National Farmers Union, the most liberal of the major farm organizations, will insist at its convention on some restrictions on government power to dispose of surplus agricultural products.

Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) —Curbstone comments of a pavement plato:

The more a man matures, the more he secretly comes to admire the iron whims of women. Those whims are the real pillars of civilization as we know it.

It is always a shock to a man to find out shortly after the honeymoon is over that the soft, compliant creature he married has a will of unyielding steel.

"I thought my wife would go through life jumping every time I snapped my fingers," he confides to an older married buddy. "She may look like a little bunny, but inside her mind she has got claws like a tiger."

"They all have," replies the marital veteran. "What seems to be your main gripe about your bride?"

"Well, I don't know just how to say it, but she seems to want everything to be perfect."

"They're all that way."

"Every last one of them?"

"Every last one of them. And if you're smart, you'll start getting used to it right now. Otherwise you'll waste the best years of your life fighting her—and still wind up losing."

It is hard for a man to do this.

He can't see why his bride gets angry if he comes home an hour late. He can't understand why she is annoyed if a restaurant headwaiter seats them at a table near the kitchen when, after all, the food tastes the same no matter where you sit.

He can't see why she wants to eat at home by candlelight, or why she gets in a blue funk if the new draperies hang an inch or two higher from the floor than she prefers, or why she squawks at the taxi driver if his cab isn't clean, or why she sends his shirts back to the laundry if the collars aren't properly ironed, or why she makes a big issue over half a hundred other matters which seem to him unimportant.

"Why make a war about it?" he asks her wonderingly.

"Because I like things to be done right," she tells him firmly.

Sensibly, for his own peace of mind, he lets her have her way. Dimly, he gradually perceives the chief mental difference between men and women.

It is this:

Man is by nature a lazy compromiser. He is content to put up with second-best arrangements because he thinks it is too much of a nuisance to fight for anything better. Left to his own devices, he would still be carrying a spear in a forgotten forest, sleeping in the rain and scratching his back against the bark of trees.

Woman is made of more durable stuff. For her, life is one long crusade for perfection. She wants things to be not just half right but exactly right—in every detail.

It is only because of woman's pursuit of perfection that railroads and airplanes run on time, napkins are on the table, streets are swept, men shave every day and smell better, and homes have flower gardens.

By being stern over such trifles, step by step she is making a better world for all.

Oh, womankind, on!

DO AMERICANS GO TO CHURCH?

Today, 13% of Catholics never go to church; neither do 33% of Protestants; nor 39% of Jews.

These are among the general conclusions noted in a survey of religious beliefs made by Dr. George Gallup's Public Opinion Survey sponsored by THE CATHOLIC DIGEST.

A smilar poll made in 1952 showed that non-attendance at church then was 18% for Catholics, 32% for Protestants, 56% for Jews. The trend, therefore, shows more Americans are attending church now, 14 years later.

Other findings:

Church attendance increases with income. 41% of the upper and 40% of the middle-income groups attend Sunday or Sabbath services every Sunday; only 33% of the lower-income group attend weekly.

The same trend is evident with occupation: 43% of professional and white - collar workers attend church weekly, whereas only 33% of farmers and service workers do.

More large-city dwellers are church-goers than are those in cities under 10,000 or rural residents: 41% to 35%.

Geography is an important factor in weekly church-going, the Gallup Poll finds. In the New England and the Middle Atlantic region, 51% and 42%, respectively, attend services every Sunday. In the Mountain and Pacific regions, however, only 32% of 30%, respectively, attend.

The higher the education, the higher the percentage of church attendance. The survey finds that 41% of college graduates attend church each week, while only 33% of those with 0-11 years of schooling attend.

Age is also an important factor. Thirty per cent of those 18-24 years never attend church, but 38% of those 65 and over don't attend.

The survey also showed that - as in 1952 - more women than men attend church. In 1966, 42% of the women and 34% of the men go to church every week. In 1952, the percentages were 33% and 29%, respectively.

Reprints of these surveys, to be examined during the next two years, are available for 25¢, discount on quantities.

IS D.C. BURNING? A subcommittee of Congress, investigating the extent and cost of Federal government record keeping, says that if one government record was burned every second, it would take 2,000 years to get rid of all of them. Government paperwork, said the subcommittee, costs $8 billion a year, or $40 per American.

REASON FOR PATENTS

The drug industry has been singled out time and again as the subject of proposals to curtail patent rights. A principal argument in support of such proposals is that there would be an immediate reduction in drug prices. This is indeed a weak argument, since drug prices generally have declined, while inflation has pushed the cost of living to new highs. The need of the drug industry for the patent system is increasing. New regulations introduced in recent years have greatly increased the testing cost of a new pharmaceutical before it can be marketed. The patent system must be permitted to provide protection if investments in increasingly costly research of new drug products are to continue.

The president of a major drug concern as spokesman for the drug industry described in 1961 congressional hearings, what patents mean in the case of his company, and as costs have continued to rise, his statement has greater validity and urgency today than ever before: "The value of patents as a stimulus for discovery is clearly understood by those who deal with the issue not in theory but in terms of actual commitments of their company's resources for research. My company is now investing more than $20 million a year in research and development. I know we could not continue to risk such investments if other manufacturers, domestic and foreign, could share in our discoveries simply by asking, without making any investment in research or any scientific contribution of their own."

The truth of this is easily demonstrated. Since 1941, there have been 366 new drugs introduced in the United States under our strong patent system. In Italy, where there are no patents, one drug has been listed, and in the Soviet Union, where there are no patents, new drug listings are zero.

Now Congress has reconvened to tackle the Nation's problems. Chief among them are the war in Vietnam, increasing centralization of power in the federal government, constant assaults on individual freedom, increase in crime, and the threat of inflation.

As for Vietnam, the only rational course to take now is to use such force as is necessary to defeat the enemy or compel him to agree to a just peace. Our troops should have the best weapons available, and the conduct of the war directed by generals and admirals; not by armchair experts.

With growing tendency to concentrate the powers of government in executive agencies and departments in Washington, executive officers increasingly strive to manage the affairs of all men.

Crime has risen forty-six percent while population has grown only eight percent during the past six years. Enough has been done for those who murder and rape and rob. It's time something is done for those who do not wish to be murdered or raped or robbed. Voluntary confessions of self-confessed criminals should be admitted in evidence against them. And there should be laws to promote more adequate procedures for the apprehension and conviction of criminals.

Failure to curb inflation stems from an unwillingness to go to the source of the problem. For years the federal government has pursued a policy of spending more than its income. The remedy is to reduce federal spending. Our elected representatives have their work cut out for them. Let's hope they stay with it. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- It has now leaked out that the Central Intelligence Agency used not only cash under the table but draft deferments to subvert the National Student Association.

The threat of the draft hung heavily over the heads of NSA officers, according to their own admissions behind closed doors, unless they followed the CIA line in their student activities.

The CIA would send an NSA representative to Vietnam, for example, and expect him on his return to oppose the anti-war movement on the campuses.

The draft deferments were obtained through CIA - White House channels until last year when Vice President Humphrey's office made the arrangements.

All this is revealed in detailed, handwritten notes, made available to us, of the NSA's secret staff meetings. The notes were kept by educational director Larry Rubin, who is resigning in protest over NSA's failure to make a clean breast of the CIA affair.

Ed Schwartz, the Vice President in charge of national affairs, brought up the draft question at a staff meeting attended by 30 people on February 9. This was five days before the NSA - CIA controversy hit the headlines. However, the officers knew Ramparts magazine was coming out with the story and were discussing what to do about it.

AGONIZING REAPPRAISAL

"You must understand our bind," said Schwartz. "It is clear now that the CIA has gotten our draft deferments for us in the past. If we blast the CIA in our statements, we will lose our deferments. We can't have an organization without a staff, and we can't have a staff without deferments."

"I THOUGHT YOU SAID THE CIA DID NOT get our deferments for us this year," interrupted Rubin.

"Yes," acknowledged Schwartz, "Phil Sherburne (last year's NSA President) worked it out with Hubert Humphrey, but our information tells us that if we blast the CIA, we'll still lose our deferments."

Schwartz then produced a proposed press statement that admitted next to nothing about the CIA link.

"Dammit, Ed," protested Al Milano, head of the student government information service, "every staff member said we should directly admit to the relationship."

"We're lying," agreed Rubin. "We do know the relationship existed."

Schwartz, noting that some of the deferred staff members were not present, argued: "How can we make decisions that will affect their future?"

At the same meeting, he also confided that the CIA had given up to $5,000, plus credit cards and free travel, to NSA's foreign representatives.

"I used to wonder why the international people lived so high," he said. "Now I know."

He added ruefully that "the CIA doesn't exactly force the caviar down our people's throats."

Four days later Eugene Groves, NSA President, returned from a hurried European trip.

KATZENBACH TO RESCUE

Groves disclosed that he had been "in communication" with Undersecretary of State Nicholas Katzenbach. There was a "possibility," Groves said, the CIA might be persuaded to make a public admission that it had financed NSA. However, he warned this would mean they could not tell the "whole truth" to the press.

"The staff agreed that no matter what," broke in Rubin from the back of the room, "we want to tell the whole truth."

Then he demanded of Groves: "First, I want to say this to your face: Why did you lie to us about your own knowledge?"

"We had to get Pulvers (NSA representative Roger Pulvers) out of Poland," replied Groves, "before any word was spread that he was CIA-tainted."

"Ed (Schwartz) said he had to lie to protect our money," retorted Rubin. "I want to know about our present complicity."

"Wait, Gene!" broke in Milano. "You've lied to us. We don't want that kind of crap any more."

Groves buried his head in his hands.

"Look," he pleaded, "I really don't know what to say. I won't apologize."

NSA's top officers continued to huddle with the CIA throughout the controversy while they put out statements claiming only incidental ties to the CIA. Indeed, the statements were prepared at the secret meetings which were held at the Marriott Motel and the home of CIA agent Robert Kiley, both in Washington.

When Rubin learned of these meetings, he threatened to resign. Schwartz on February 27 called Rubin into his CIA-carpeted, CIA- furnished office.

"You're a moral puritan, which now makes you a moral pervert," snapped Schwartz. He warned that Rubin's demand for full public disclosure could end up causing NSA staffmen to die in Vietnam.

Pentagon Dispatches Wrong Locomotives to Asian Front; Loses Cool Million Dollars in Snafu.

WASHINGTON, D.C.: - If anyone needs 10 locomotives, I can get them for you wholesale. Very cheap. Trouble is they're in Thailand where the Dept. of Defense sent them at a cost of $1 million.

They're standing, virtually useless, on sidings of the Royal State Railway. They've been there for several years now doing a little shunting in one or two yards instead of rushing men and vital cargo along the Thais' northeast mainline to bolster the economy and defenses against the local brand of Viet Cong.

The Thai government truly needed them back in '63. They still don't have those 10 locomotives. The U.S. government is out over a million dollars - absolutely wasted.

New locomotives were ordered to replace the useless engines on August 3, 1965. The new haulers reportedly still are not there.

The loss of over a million dollars resulted from a mix-up in orders under the military assistance program. That puts it charitably.

Actually some of the procurement officers knew the locomotives being sent to Thailand were not what the Thais needed in Bangkok. But, say federal investigators who ripped wide open a credibility gap, the U.S. Army purchasing brass decided to go ahead, order the engines, and ship them some 12,000 miles to Thailand anyway in order to avoid furor over the entire "incident."

So, in the hope that it would all be overlooked, the officers knowingly blew $1 million.

It all would have remained in the archives despite an investigation by the General Accounting Office if angry leaders of several metal trades unions and other government employes' unions whose members are being bumped from jobs by the closing of bases in an economy move had not brought the information to this reporter.

These unionists claim that the GAO discovered wide gaps in the Defense Dept. procurement-management system in this instance and therefore they charge it is reasonable to assume that many more scores of millions are being wasted. These wasted funds, say they, could support some of the military and naval bases now being shut with such loss of jobs and shifting of personnel.

Some of the unionized personnel are sometimes ordered by the Defense Dept. to report to bases 2,500 miles distant within three or four days after they receive notice of base closings. So they are grimly determined to dig deeper into the Defense Dept. procurement system.

The story of the locomotives reads like the script of a Peter Sellers comedy - an expensive one.

Back in 1962, when I was in Bangkok, the Thais decided to swing into action against the encroachments from the Communist infiltrators. They needed railway rolling stock.

They went to the U.S. Army, which in turn, under authority granted in 1957, agreed to supply 10 big locomotives. The Thais indicated they needed 80-ton, 1,200-horsepower Diesels.

Somehow the order went through for 57-ton, 788-horsepower locomotives in 1963.

These arrived in Thailand in August 1963. Official investigations completed this past January disclosed that the procurement officer ignored the Thais' specifications and needs.

A commanding general stated that the "requirement" of the customer (the Thais) had been virtually ignored and that the referral of the purchase description to the office of Commander in Chief, Pacific (CINCPAC) for comment after the award of the contract had been untimely."

Another General concluded that a major cause of the loss had been the failure of the Army officer to sit down in face-to-face meeting with the Thais to insure that all parties understood the requirements.

When the locomotives arrived they turned out to be shunting engines for yards, not long hauls. The engines, furthermore, developed transmission failures, Diesel engine overheating, insufficient power, drive failures, - and they accelerated too slowly and could not maintain speed.

So they were useless for what the Thais wanted and needed. Therefore 10 new engines were ordered on August 3, 1965, at a cost of $2.3 million. As far as can be determined, the new ones still are not there.

So after almost five years, the loss of $1 million, and the loss of face amongst our most devoted allies, the Thais, they still are in dire need of locomotives.

And the labor people now are asking: What of the Defense Dept.'s vaunted efficiency? Why should the federal employes - now losing jobs in city after city - take the rap for the Pentagon's mismanagement?

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

FOR THE BIRDS - AND OTHER CREATURES

The three-day 32nd North American Wildlife and Natural Resources Conference opens in San Francisco on Monday (March 13).

The human environment. The phrase keeps recurring more frequently. The words indicate a growing awareness among the general public of a thesis long held by conservationists that man should preserve wildlife and wilderness areas not for sentimental or scientific reasons but for his own basic good, his own needs.

Various wild creatures making a last fight for survival include the whooping crane, polar bear, grizzly bear, ivory-billed woodpecker, California condor, New Caledonia cagou, and American bald eagle. Few people know or care that the Arabian oryx (a small antelope) is virtually extinct, but everyone knows about the whooping cranes and is rooting for their survival.

The news is both good and bad. We lost a whooper last year. There are now only 44, by government count. But that's still more than the total population of 26 adults and 6 young in 1963.

The news about bald eagles is bad. It is feared that insecticides are killing them off or rendering them sterile. On the other hand, the condor, another of this country's rarest species and the largest - 10 feet from wingtip - appears to be making a comeback. According to the California Department of Fish and Game, the count this year was 51, as against 38 individuals last year. Inasmuch as the fierce condor does not exactly imitate the mink in the reproduction department, that has to be pretty good going.

Significantly, the theme of the Wildlife Management Institute's conference in San Francisco in mid-March will be "Human Needs and Environmental Limits." Many of the nearly 50 speakers on the three-day program will suggest or describe solutions to the ever-present pressures of population growth upon resources and the quality of the human environment. Others will discuss resources, research findings and management developments.

Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall recently pointed out: "The seemingly irreversible trend in the world today...is toward more and more human beings, lumped together in ever-widening urban clusters...Efforts to feed and clothe this surging population, together with the downright arithmetic of the space it must occupy simply to exist, impose a growing threat to wild areas and animals which remain."

Everybody knows about the dodo, but the classic example of extinction in modern times was that of the passenger pigeon. That bird was unbelievably prolific. John James Audubon estimated that one flight which he witnessed contained well over one billion pigeons. The birds passed over him for hours on end in sun-darkening planes, layer upon layer.

The birds were good to eat. Professional hunters amassed huge profits from pigeons sent by rail to major towns and cities. Firing at a flock on the wing with both barrels of a shotgun often brought down more than 100 birds. The annual slaughter of tens of millions of birds spelled out the tragedy. By the early 1900s the few remaining wild specimens had disappeared.

The lessons of conservation are best dramatized, it seems, by stories of birds. Theodore Roosevelt once wrote: "When I hear of the destruction of a species, I feel just as if all the works of some great author had perished; as if we had lost all, instead of only part, of Polybius and Livy."

LEARNING THROUGH PLAYING

Retail sales of toys totaled over $2 billion last year. Present emphasis by psychologists on the importance of an early start on life patterns and on the power of play in developing a child's potential may increase the market substantially.

These are among the reasons that a trend toward educational toys is evident at the American Toy Fair, which has begun a two-week stay in three locations in New York City. Between 900 and 1,000 toy manufacturers display their wares at the annual fair, and more than 10,000 buyers - from practically every state and 40 foreign countries - are expected.

Typical of the trend are two new games. One is The Propaganda Game, which teaches youngsters and adults to analyze writing and its emotional impact on the reader. Another, which has been merchandised experimentally at Hess's of Allentown, is an Extra Sensory Perception game created by Kreskin, who describes himself as a mentalist.

Several large corporations are now entering the toy and game industry. With good reason: by 1970 we will have 60 million youngsters under the age of 15 in the United States.

UNHAPPY FARMERS

The National Farmers Union, which opens a four-day national convention in Oklahoma City on Sunday, March 12, might well ponder the law of supply and demand as it applies to American agriculture. Surplus supplies of most farm products have disappeared, largely because of heavy foreign demand. Such a situation ordinarily would produce higher prices. But then, agriculture is not an ordinary business. Prices received by farmers in the month ending Feb. 15 were 7 per cent below those received in the same period of 1966.

Farmers and cattlemen in the Middle West have reacted in predictable fashion to the agricultural price slump: Many of them have threatened to plow under crops and reduce herds until prices rise. By the same token, farmers understandably are reluctant to take advantage of the increased acreage allotments authorized by Agriculture Secretary Orville L. Freeman. Of every three additional acres authorized by Freeman, it is estimated, only two will be planted in 1967.

Hesitation to expand production may carry over into 1968, even if agricultural prices increase appreciably. Farmers are apprehensive lest new surpluses accumulate, in which case the federal government would be able to manipulate farm prices through surplus disposal programs. The more conservative farmers have long maintained that such programs have the effect of denying a fair return to agricultural producers. It is thought that the National Farmers Union, the most liberal of the major farm organizations, will insist at its convention on some restrictions on government power to dispose of surplus agricultural products.

The more a man matures, the more he secretly comes to admire the iron whims of women. Those whims are the real pillars of civilization as we know it.

It is always a shock to a man to find out shortly after the honeymoon is over that the soft, compliant creature he married has a will of unyielding steel.

"I thought my wife would go through life jumping every time I snapped my fingers," he confides to an older married buddy. "She may look like a little bunny, but inside her mind she has got claws like a tiger."

"They all have," replies the marital veteran. "What seems to be your main gripe about your bride?"

"Well, I don't know just how to say it, but she seems to want everything to be perfect."

"They're all that way."

"Every last one of them?"

"Every last one of them. And if you're smart, you'll start getting used to it right now. Otherwise you'll waste the best years of your life fighting her—and still wind up losing."

It is hard for a man to do this.

He can't see why his bride gets angry if he comes home an hour late. He can't understand why she is annoyed if a restaurant headwaiter seats them at a table near the kitchen when, after all, the food tastes the same no matter where you sit.

He can't see why she wants to eat at home by candlelight, or why she gets in a blue funk if the new draperies hang an inch or two higher from the floor than she prefers, or why she squawks at the taxi driver if his cab isn't clean, or why she sends his shirts back to the laundry if the collars aren't properly ironed, or why she makes a big issue over half a hundred other matters which seem to him unimportant.

"Why make a war about it?" he asks her wonderingly.

"Because I like things to be done right," she tells him firmly.

Sensibly, for his own peace of mind, he lets her have her way. Dimly, he gradually perceives the chief mental difference between men and women.

It is this:

Man is by nature a lazy compromiser. He is content to put up with second-best arrangements because he thinks it is too much of a nuisance to fight for anything better. Left to his own devices, he would still be carrying a spear in a forgotten forest, sleeping in the rain and scratching his back against the bark of trees.

Woman is made of more durable stuff. For her, life is one long crusade for perfection. She wants things to be not just half right but exactly right—in every detail.

It is only because of woman's pursuit of perfection that railroads and airplanes run on time, napkins are on the table, streets are swept, men shave every day and smell better, and homes have flower gardens.

By being stern over such trifles, step by step she is making a better world for all.

Oh, womankind, on!

DO AMERICANS GO TO CHURCH?

Today, 13% of Catholics never go to church; neither do 33% of Protestants; nor 39% of Jews.

These are among the general conclusions noted in a survey of religious beliefs made by Dr. George Gallup's Public Opinion Survey sponsored by THE CATHOLIC DIGEST.

A similar poll made in 1952 showed that non-attendance at church then was 18% for Catholics, 32% for Protestants, 56% for Jews. The trend, therefore, shows more Americans are attending church now, 14 years later.

Other findings:

Church attendance increases with income. 41% of the upper and 40% of the middle-income groups attend Sunday or Sabbath services every Sunday; only 33% of the lower-income group attend weekly.

The same trend is evident with occupation: 43% of professional and white - collar workers attend church weekly, whereas only 33% of farmers and service workers do.

More large-city dwellers are church-goers than are those in cities under 10,000 or rural residents: 41% to 35%.

Geography is an important factor in weekly church-going, the Gallup Poll finds. In the New England and the Middle Atlantic region, 51% and 42%, respectively, attend services every Sunday. In the Mountain and Pacific regions, however, only 32% of 30%, respectively, attend.

The higher the education, the higher the percentage of church attendance. The survey finds that 41% of college graduates attend church each week, while only 33% of those with 0-11 years of schooling attend.

Age is also an important factor. Thirty per cent of those 18-24 years never attend church, but 38% of those 65 and over don't attend.

The survey also showed that - as in 1952 - more women than men attend church. In 1966, 42% of the women and 34% of the men go to church every week. In 1952, the percentages were 33% and 29%, respectively.

Reprints of these surveys, to be examined during the next two years, are available for 25¢, discount on quantities.

With growing tendency to concentrate the powers of government in executive agencies and departments in Washington, executive officers increasingly strive to manage the affairs of all men.

Crime has risen forty-six percent while population has grown only eight percent during the past six years. Enough has been done for those who murder and rape and rob. It's time something is done for those who do not wish to be murdered or raped or robbed. Voluntary confessions of self-confessed criminals should be admitted in evidence against them. And there should be laws to promote more adequate procedures for the apprehension and conviction of criminals.

Failure to curb inflation stems from an unwillingness to go to the source of the problem. For years the federal government has pursued a policy of spending more than its income. The remedy is to reduce federal spending. Our elected representatives have their work cut out for them. Let's hope they stay with it. HLH

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- It has now leaked out that the Central Intelligence Agency used not only cash under the table but draft deferments to subvert the National Student Association.

The threat of the draft hung heavily over the heads of NSA officers, according to their own admissions behind closed doors, unless they followed the CIA line in their student activities.

The CIA would send an NSA representative to Vietnam, for example, and expect him on his return to oppose the anti-war movement on the campuses.

The draft deferments were obtained through CIA - White House channels until last year when Vice President Humphrey's office made the arrangements.

All this is revealed in detailed, handwritten notes, made available to us, of the NSA's secret staff meetings. The notes were kept by educational director Larry Rubin, who is resigning in protest over NSA's failure to make a clean breast of the CIA affair.

Ed Schwartz, the Vice President in charge of national affairs, brought up the draft question at a staff meeting attended by 30 people on February 9. This was five days before the NSA - CIA controversy hit the headlines. However, the officers knew Ramparts magazine was coming out with the story and were discussing what to do about it.

AGONIZING REAPPRAISAL

"You must understand our bind," said Schwartz. "It is clear now that the CIA has gotten our draft deferments for us in the past. If we blast the CIA in our statements, we will lose our deferments. We can't have an organization without a staff, and we can't have a staff without deferments."

"I THOUGHT YOU SAID THE CIA DID NOT get our deferments for us this year," interrupted Rubin.

"Yes," acknowledged Schwartz, "Phil Sherburne (last year's NSA President) worked it out with Hubert Humphrey, but our information tells us that if we blast the CIA, we'll still lose our deferments."

Schwartz then produced a proposed press statement that admitted next to nothing about the CIA link.

"Dammit, Ed," protested Al Milano, head of the student government information service, "every staff member said we should directly admit to the relationship."

"We're lying," agreed Rubin. "We do know the relationship existed."

Schwartz, noting that some of the deferred staff members were not present, argued: "How can we make decisions that will affect their future?"

At the same meeting, he also confided that the CIA had given up to $5,000, plus credit cards and free travel, to NSA's foreign representatives.

"I used to wonder why the international people lived so high," he said. "Now I know."

He added ruefully that "the CIA doesn't exactly force the caviar down our people's throats."

KATZENBACH TO RESCUE

Groves disclosed that he had been "in communication" with Undersecretary of State Nicholas Katzenbach. There was a "possibility," Groves said, the CIA might be persuaded to make a public admission that it had financed NSA. However, he warned this would mean they could not tell the "whole truth" to the press.

"The staff agreed that no matter what," broke in Rubin from the back of the room, "we want to tell the whole truth."

Then he demanded of Groves: "First, I want to say this to your face: Why did you lie to us about your own knowledge?"

"We had to get Pulvers (NSA representative Roger Pulvers) out of Poland," replied Groves, "before any word was spread that he was CIA-tainted."

"Ed (Schwartz) said he had to lie to protect our money," retorted Rubin. "I want to know about our present complicity."

"Wait, Gene!" broke in Milano. "You've lied to us. We don't want that kind of crap any more."

Groves buried his head in his hands.

"Look," he pleaded, "I really don't know what to say. I won't apologize."

NSA's top officers continued to huddle with the CIA throughout the controversy while they put out statements claiming only incidental ties to the CIA. Indeed, the statements were prepared at the secret meetings which were held at the Marriott Motel and the home of CIA agent Robert Kiley, both in Washington.

When Rubin learned of these meetings, he threatened to resign. Schwartz on February 27 called Rubin into his CIA-carpeted, CIA- furnished office.

"You're a moral puritan, which now makes you a moral pervert," snapped Schwartz. He warned that Rubin's demand for full public disclosure could end up causing NSA staffmen to die in Vietnam.

Inside Labor

WASHINGTON, D.C.: - If anyone needs 10 locomotives, I can get them for you wholesale. Very cheap. Trouble is they're in Thailand where the Dept. of Defense sent them at a cost of $1 million.

They're standing, virtually useless, on sidings of the Royal State Railway. They've been there for several years now doing a little shunting in one or two yards instead of rushing men and vital cargo along the Thais' northeast mainline to bolster the economy and defenses against the local brand of Viet Cong.

The Thai government truly needed them back in '63. They still don't have those 10 locomotives. The U.S. government is out over a million dollars - absolutely wasted.

New locomotives were ordered to replace the useless engines on August 3, 1965. The new haulers reportedly still are not there.

The loss of over a million dollars resulted from a mix-up in orders under the military assistance program. That puts it charitably.

Actually some of the procurement officers knew the locomotives being sent to Thailand were not what the Thais needed in Bangkok. But, say federal investigators who ripped wide open a credibility gap, the U.S. Army purchasing brass decided to go ahead, order the engines, and ship them some 12,000 miles to Thailand anyway in order to avoid furor over the entire "incident."

So, in the hope that it would all be overlooked, the officers knowingly blew $1 million.

It all would have remained in the archives despite an investigation by the General Accounting Office if angry leaders of several metal trades unions and other government employes' unions whose members are being bumped from jobs by the closing of bases in an economy move had not brought the information to this reporter.

These unionists claim that the GAO discovered wide gaps in the Defense Dept. procurement-management system in this instance and therefore they charge it is reasonable to assume that many more scores of millions are being wasted. These wasted funds, say they, could support some of the military and naval bases now being shut with such loss of jobs and shifting of personnel.

Some of the unionized personnel are sometimes ordered by the Defense Dept. to report to bases 2,500 miles distant within three or four days after they receive notice of base closings. So they are grimly determined to dig deeper into the Defense Dept. procurement system.

The story of the locomotives reads like the script of a Peter Sellers comedy - an expensive one.

Back in 1962, when I was in Bangkok, the Thais decided to swing into action against the encroachments from the Communist infiltrators. They needed railway rolling stock.

They went to the U.S. Army, which in turn, under authority granted in 1957, agreed to supply 10 big locomotives. The Thais indicated they needed 80-ton, 1,200-horsepower Diesels.

These arrived in Thailand in August 1963. Official investigations completed this past January disclosed that the procurement officer ignored the Thais' specifications and needs.

A commanding general stated that the "requirement" of the customer (the Thais) had been virtually ignored and that the referral of the purchase description to the office of Commander in Chief, Pacific (CINCPAC) for comment after the award of the contract had been untimely."

Another General concluded that a major cause of the loss had been the failure of the Army officer to sit down in face-to-face meeting with the Thais to insure that all parties understood the requirements.

When the locomotives arrived they turned out to be shunting engines for yards, not long hauls. The engines, furthermore, developed transmission failures, Diesel engine overheating, insufficient power, drive failures, - and they accelerated too slowly and could not maintain speed.

So they were useless for what the Thais wanted and needed. Therefore 10 new engines were ordered on August 3, 1965, at a cost of $2.3 million. As far as can be determined, the new ones still are not there.

So after almost five years, the loss of $1 million, and the loss of face amongst our most devoted allies, the Thais, they still are in dire need of locomotives.

And the labor people now are asking: What of the Defense Dept.'s vaunted efficiency? Why should the federal employes - now losing jobs in city after city - take the rap for the Pentagon's mismanagement?

Eat Needed Milk Supply

KENNETT -- Do you have difficulty in getting your preteen age daughter and son to drink? Don't worry about this skill in bringing up your children. Why not have the family "eat their milk." There are ways to stir nonfat dry milk in main dishes, desserts, drinks, sauces, bread and rolls.

One-third cup of nonfat dry milk with enough water added to make one liquid cup yields 87 calories. This amount of skim milk contains the same amounts of B vitamins, calcium, and protein as whole fluid milk. Whole fluid milk supplies Vitamin A and fat content. One cup of whole fluid milk has 166 calories.

Vitamin A is needed for you to have healthy skin and bright eyes. Should you plan to use mostly non-fat dry milk; plan to use foods high in Vitamin A. These foods are dark-green leafy vegetables and deep-yellow vegetables and fruits.

The extension bulletin "Using Nonfat Dry Milk" is free upon request from your University Extension Center. The whipped topping recipe is economical and easily prepared. (1) Combine 1/2 cup nonfat dry milk and 1/2 cup ice water. (2) Beat as rapidly as possible until soft peaks form. (If using an electric mixer, beat at high speed 3 to 4 minutes.) Add 2 to 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Beat until stiff and fold in 1/4 cup sugar. This recipe makes 3 cups. For whipped fruit topping substitute either chilled cherry, apricot, orange, or pineapple juice for ice water and use only one tablespoon lemon juice. This may be used instead of whipped cream in salads and desserts. When used as a garnish for desserts, plan to use within one hour.

Cooky mix, cornbread mix, brownie mix, vanilla pudding mix and variations and white sauce mix are included the tasty recipes of this bulletin. You not only save time and energy by using non-fat dry milk mixes but they are economical.

Nonfat dry milk is easy to store. It should be tightly sealed and stored in a dry place. Nonfat dry milk is easy to measure, dissolves instantly and may be added to recipes in dry form. When whipping egg white or gelatin, nonfat dry milk may be added in dry form. It may also be used with potato water for whipped potatoes. Another way to eat your milk is mixing it in cereals while being cooked.

Nonfat dry milk is convenient for hikes, picnics, camping, and to have on hand for emergencies. It is an ingredient in many of the mixes found on the market. One of the reasons it is less expensive than whole fluid milk is the cut in cost of transportation and needs to refrigeration. When unopened the shelf life of nonfat milk is four to six weeks.

Eat your milk and enjoy the food. Mrs. Cook plan to get the amounts needed by member of your family; 3 cups for children, 4 cups for teenagers, and two for adults. Have you tried using one-half whole fluid milk and one-half nonfat dry milk mixed for beverages?

REFLECTIONS OF GRAY

Grieve not for gems of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves are said to bear.
No gem was ever born to blush unseen
The mighty ocean knows each one is there.
How dim to think one fragrant flower is lost.
Worn proudly on the mother earth's fair breast,
Kissed by the sun and rain and meadow air,
Unseen by man, each one is truly blessed.
Likewise, no life was never spent in vain,
Though marble halls it never lived to grace,
The Wise Creator sees each simple task.

Lettuce Crop Is Excellent

NEW YORK (AP)—Let them eat lettuce.

Lots of it.

That is the plea of farmers in California's Imperial Valley and Arizona's adjoining Yuma Valley.

The weather has been ideal, the crop excellent, and green leaves are piling up in supermarkets at low prices.

It is good news for everyone but the farmer, and points up one of the problems of food prices.

The 800 lettuce growers in the Imperial Valley may lose $21 million on the crop, estimates the Western Growers Association in Los Angeles.

Lettuce currently is selling for about 4 cents a head or $1 a carton harvested, trimmed, packed and delivered to shipping points. The association estimates growers must make $1.75 just to break even.

More than 1,000 acres have been abandoned without a head being cut.

"It is time the house wife was told bluntly that she can't expect food to be cheap while the cost of raising, processing and selling it keeps going up," said Robert L. Gibson, president of the California Canners and Growers.

"I have yet to see a consumers' picket line in front of an automobile dealership or a clothing store or a ski lift."

The militant national farmers organization is trying to bring meat and milk supplies more closely into balance with demand, urging members to sell bred cows and sows.

If it works, the number of calves and pigs this spring may be cut sharply enough to raise meat prices this fall. Milk supplies also may be withheld in the months ahead.

KEEP BASEMENT DRY AFTER THAW WITH A SUMP PUMP

Winter is usually fun for the kiddies, but for most grown-ups it's irksome at best. Transportation becomes snarled. Grocery shopping is inconvenient. Schools close down after every heavy snowfall, and children are constantly underfoot or tracking the nasty white stuff in and out of the house.

But the thaw that follows a heavy snow can be even more of a problem -- and mighty expensive if it means flooding in a basement that's been converted into a utility room, recreation area or workshop for dad.

The basement should be protected against flooding at all times, not only to prevent damage to valuable equipment but also for health reasons, the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau points out. One way to do it is with a sump pump or cellar drainer.

The pump is installed in a pit or sump at a convenient spot. When water in the pit reaches a predetermined level, a float switch automatically activates the pump. It continues to operate until all the water has been drained out, when it shuts off automatically.

Basement flooding can result not only from snow thaws but also from heavy rains, broken water mains and even plumbed-in appliances. A sump pump can solve most flooding problems. It comes in different types and sizes, and homeowners with flooding problems should consult a plumbing contractor on the right choice of equipment.

Twin Sister's Untidiness Is Cause for Her Concern

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I am 13 and have a twin sister who is five minutes older than I am. Just because she is older she thinks she can boss me around. We have a beautiful bedroom and I keep all my clothes nice and neat so I can bring my friends in to play records. Half the time I cannot do this because my sister's clothes are all over the bed, which isn't even made. She also has the nerve to want to wear some of my clothes because they look neater than hers. I think she is old enough to pick up after herself. She is setting a pattern for how she will keep house when she gets married. What can be done about this?—DEBBIE

DEAR DEBBIE—What does your mother say and do about your sister's untidiness? Many sisters have this problem so I am sure we will get many good suggestions for you. Watch for them.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—My Pointer is to help Mrs. G.L.B. break her little boy's habit of eating toilet soap. A bottle of mildly hot-tasting liquid for the nails of children who bite their nails is quite inexpensive. A few drops of this on the soap every day for about a week will tingle his little tongue just enough to discourage his future soap snacks. He may cry a little but the liquid is perfectly harmless.—MRS. T. L. V.

DEAR POLLY—I can remember what mom used to do to lick the problem of us kids biting a chunk out of a soap bar. She put the soap in a cover she crocheted to look like a turtle. Sikeston Students Pledge Sorority

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Miss Robin Walters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Walters, 926 Hawthorne, Sikeston, and Miss Judy Matthews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob L. Matthews, 725 Mimosa, Sikeston, have pledged Delta Nu chapter of Alpha Delta Pi social sorority at Southeast Missouri State College.

Miss Walters will model in the sorority's annual "Guide for Brides" fashion show Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Academic auditorium.

Eat Needed Milk Supply

KENNETT -- Do you have difficulty in getting your preteen age daughter and son to drink? Don't worry about this skill in bringing up your children. Why not have the family "eat their milk." There are ways to stir nonfat dry milk in main dishes, desserts, drinks, sauces, bread and rolls.

One-third cup of nonfat dry milk with enough water added to make one liquid cup yields 87 calories. This amount of skim milk contains the same amounts of B vitamins, calcium, and protein as whole fluid milk. Whole fluid milk supplies Vitamin A and fat content. One cup of whole fluid milk has 166 calories.

Vitamin A is needed for you to have healthy skin and bright eyes. Should you plan to use mostly non-fat dry milk; plan to use foods high in Vitamin A. These foods are dark-green leafy vegetables and deep-yellow vegetables and fruits.

The extension bulletin "Using Nonfat Dry Milk" is free upon request from your University Extension Center. The whipped topping recipe is economical and easily prepared. (1) Combine 1/2 cup nonfat dry milk and 1/2 cup ice water. (2) Beat as rapidly as possible until soft peaks form. (If using an electric mixer, beat at high speed 3 to 4 minutes.) Add 2 to 3 tablespoons lemon juice. Beat until stiff and fold in 1/4 cup sugar. This recipe makes 3 cups. For whipped fruit topping substitute either chilled cherry, apricot, orange, or pineapple juice for ice water and use only one tablespoon lemon juice. This may be used instead of whipped cream in salads and desserts. When used as a garnish for desserts, plan to use within one hour.

Cooky mix, cornbread mix, brownie mix, vanilla pudding mix and variations and white sauce mix are included the tasty recipes of this bulletin. You not only save time and energy by using non-fat dry milk mixes but they are economical.

Nonfat dry milk is easy to store. It should be tightly sealed and stored in a dry place. Nonfat dry milk is easy to measure, dissolves instantly and may be added to recipes in dry form. When whipping egg white or gelatin, nonfat dry milk may be added in dry form. It may also be used with potato water for whipped potatoes. Another way to eat your milk is mixing it in cereals while being cooked.

Nonfat dry milk is convenient for hikes, picnics, camping, and to have on hand for emergencies. It is an ingredient in many of the mixes found on the market. One of the reasons it is less expensive than whole fluid milk is the cut in cost of transportation and needs to refrigeration. When unopened the shelf life of nonfat milk is four to six weeks.

Eat your milk and enjoy the food. Mrs. Cook plan to get the amounts needed by member of your family; 3 cups for children, 4 cups for teenagers, and two for adults. Have you tried using one-half whole fluid milk and one-half nonfat dry milk mixed for beverages?

REFLECTIONS OF GRAY

Grieve not for gems of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves are said to bear.
No gem was ever born to blush unseen
The mighty ocean knows each one is there.
How dim to think one fragrant flower is lost.
Worn proudly on the mother earth's fair breast,
Kissed by the sun and rain and meadow air,
Unseen by man, each one is truly blessed.
Likewise, no life was never spent in vain,
Though marble halls it never lived to grace,
The Wise Creator sees each simple task.

Andersons Observe Anniversary

CHARLESTON - Mr. and Mrs. Kirb Anderson celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday, Feb. 19 at their home, 216 North Green. Over 100 guests called between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.

Mrs. Tommy Smithson, granddaughter, of Bardwell, Ky., received the guests with Mr. and Mrs. Anderson. Miss Patsy Anderson of San Francisco, Calif., another granddaughter, presided at the guest register. The house was decorated throughout with various flowers of gold. The buffet held an arrangement of gold rose buds and a pair of gold candelabra. The refreshment table was covered with an embroidered white linen cloth and was centered with the three tiered anniversary cake, decorated in gold and white. The silver coffee service was at one end of the table and the crystal punch bowl at the other end.

Serving were Mrs. Margaret Norton, a granddaughter of Mt. Clemons, Mich., the following daughters, Mrs. Bill Barnes of East Prairie, Mrs. Albert Walker of Cairo, Ill., Mrs. Charles Lingle of Dogwood, and the following daughters-in-law, Mrs. C. K. Anderson, Jr., of East Prairie and Mrs. Bill Anderson.

Also there to attend her parents' anniversary was Mrs. William Holder of Detroit, Mich. All of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's seven children were able to attend except Charles Anderson of San Francisco, Calif.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson were married in the Concord church near Charleston Feb. 18, 1917.

Lettuce Crop Is Excellent

NEW YORK (AP)—Let them eat lettuce.

Lots of it.

That is the plea of farmers in California's Imperial Valley and Arizona's adjoining Yuma Valley.

The weather has been ideal, the crop excellent, and green leaves are piling up in supermarkets at low prices.

It is good news for everyone but the farmer, and points up one of the problems of food prices.

The 800 lettuce growers in the Imperial Valley may lose $21 million on the crop, estimates the Western Growers Association in Los Angeles.

Lettuce currently is selling for about 4 cents a head or $1 a carton harvested, trimmed, packed and delivered to shipping points. The association estimates growers must make $1.75 just to break even.

More than 1,000 acres have been abandoned without a head being cut.

"It is time the house wife was told bluntly that she can't expect food to be cheap while the cost of raising, processing and selling it keeps going up," said Robert L. Gibson, president of the California Canners and Growers.

"I have yet to see a consumers' picket line in front of an automobile dealership or a clothing store or a ski lift."

The militant national farmers organization is trying to bring meat and milk supplies more closely into balance with demand, urging members to sell bred cows and sows.

If it works, the number of calves and pigs this spring may be cut sharply enough to raise meat prices this fall. Milk supplies also may be withheld in the months ahead.

Twin Sister's Untidiness Is Cause for Her Concern

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—I am 13 and have a twin sister who is five minutes older than I am. Just because she is older she thinks she can boss me around. We have a beautiful bedroom and I keep all my clothes nice and neat so I can bring my friends in to play records. Half the time I cannot do this because my sister's clothes are all over the bed, which isn't even made. She also has the nerve to want to wear some of my clothes because they look neater than hers. I think she is old enough to pick up after herself. She is setting a pattern for how she will keep house when she gets married. What can be done about this?—DEBBIE

DEAR DEBBIE—What does your mother say and do about your sister's untidiness? Many sisters have this problem so I am sure we will get many good suggestions for you. Watch for them.—POLLY

DEAR POLLY—My Pointer is to help Mrs. G.L.B. break her little boy's habit of eating toilet soap. A bottle of mildly hot-tasting liquid for the nails of children who bite their nails is quite inexpensive. A few drops of this on the soap every day for about a week will tingle his little tongue just enough to discourage his future soap snacks. He may cry a little but the liquid is perfectly harmless.—MRS. T. L. V.

DEAR POLLY—I can remember what mom used to do to lick the problem of us kids biting a chunk out of a soap bar. She put the soap in a cover she crocheted to look like a turtle. No more soap-eating and more fun in the tub. Also a terry cloth cover could be stitched up to hold the soap. Have either an elastic or a drawstring at the top opening where the soap goes in.—KATHY

DEAR POLLY—When my aunt was in the hospital I noticed that when the nurse's aid came in to rub her back with alcohol some of the cold alcohol always splashed on my aunt when the nurse poured it out of the bottle. I took two empty roll-on deodorant bottles, cleaned them thoroughly and filled them with alcohol. They worked beautifully and the nurses were very pleased. The job was quicker and not so wasteful.—MRS. J. J. W.

KEEP BASEMENT DRY AFTER THAW WITH A SUMP PUMP

Winter is usually fun for the kiddies, but for most grown-ups it's irksome at best. Transportation becomes snarled. Grocery shopping is inconvenient. Schools close down after every heavy snowfall, and children are constantly underfoot or tracking the nasty white stuff in and out of the house.

But the thaw that follows a heavy snow can be even more of a problem -- and mighty expensive if it means flooding in a basement that's been converted into a utility room, recreation area or workshop for dad.

The basement should be protected against flooding at all times, not only to prevent damage to valuable equipment but also for health reasons, the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau points out. One way to do it is with a sump pump or cellar drainer.

The pump is installed in a pit or sump at a convenient spot. When water in the pit reaches a predetermined level, a float switch automatically activates the pump. It continues to operate until all the water has been drained out, when it shuts off automatically.

Basement flooding can result not only from snow thaws but also from heavy rains, broken water mains and even plumbed-in appliances. A sump pump can solve most flooding problems. It comes in different types and sizes, and homeowners with flooding problems should consult a plumbing contractor on the right choice of equipment.

Jays Fall in State Tourney

Lindbergh's Faerber Brothers Dominate Game

BY RON JAYNES

ST. LOUIS - What advantage do signs have on a basketball game? Well...One would think not any...that is toward the game, but last night at Washington University field house where the quarterfinal round of the Missouri class L basketball tournament was held... one sign stood out among all of the 17 strung from the balcony...that one read "Sic 'em George"....That phrase only meant the Flyers' All-Stater from last season, George Faerber.

The Flyers and Faerber smashed Charleston's defense and corraled its offense in taking a 77-46 victory that ended the Jays' victory streak at 19 and stretched their own to 19.

George wasted little time in proving to the Charleston fans and others in the gymnasium that he is considered one of the best players in the state.

As the 6-4, 215-pound postman opened the game he got the tip and then hit a six-foot shot to start the scoring and send him on his way to 25 points and 23 rebounds.

The Charleston quintet was bidding for its 20th consecutive victory, its 24th triumph and its first state tournament semi-final berth in the history of the school.

Lindbergh had no weak spots. If they had the Blue Jays failed to spot them as the Jays tried everything to stop the Flyers' scoring machine. Coach Gary Wadlington said: "We used a man to man, we doubled and triple-teamed him, used a zone and we still couldn't stop him."

Two negative factors defeated the Jays, their shooting and their rebounding. Lindbergh hit 29 of 68 field goals and pulled 59 rebounds while Charleston connected on 17 of 58 and collected only 31 rebounds.

Both squads opened with a man to man defense with Charleston sagging back off the guards on big George.

As the game opened, each squad exchanged baskets until George hit a bucket with 2:11 left in the first period and drew a foul that he hit for an 11-8 lead. The Flyers never trailed again.

Faerber continued to draw fouls as Charleston was forced to come out on the guards after Jim Gannaway hit three straight buckets from 20 feet out, when they came out George went in and sent his team into a 15-8 first period lead.

Somewhat surprising to Charleston fans was that Lindbergh possessed good speed and used a fast break against the Jays in the second period that caught them flat footed. The performance sent the Flyers into an early 21-16 lead with 3:51 remaining in the half.

Three obstacles Charleston had to overcome when the second half started were planted in everyone's mind. (1) The Jays needed to rebound if they were to win, (2) They needed to get back on defense and (3) perhaps the most unlikely of all, was to stop big George...

After a timeout with a little more than two minutes to go in the period, three buckets by Charleston's Betts cut a 27-18 lead to 27-24 at the half. Betts hit three 25 footers to put his team back in the game as the Flyers seemed to be pulling away.

Halftime statistics showed Charleston hitting on only 12 of 31 field goal attempts while Lindbergh hit 10 of 29 and the Flyers scored on seven of 10 free throws and collected 20 rebounds compared to Charleston's zero for one at the line and 16 rebounds. George had 11 of the Flyers' rebounds at the half and brother, Ken, pulled six. Brown topped the Jays with six and Jones was credited with five.

Charleston had only one free throw opportunity up to the half while Lindbergh was charged with two fouls, one offensive and one defensive. Charleston drew 7 fouls.

The final period was a repeat of the third quarter. Charleston was unable to get back into the ball game and fell back 23 points before putting in subs for the last two minutes and 53 seconds of the game.

The Jays finally got big George out of the ball game but it was too late. He left the game after his fifth personal foul with 1:04 remaining.

Charleston's cheering squad stayed right down to the last second and showed good sportsmanship as it congratulated the players for getting as far as they did.

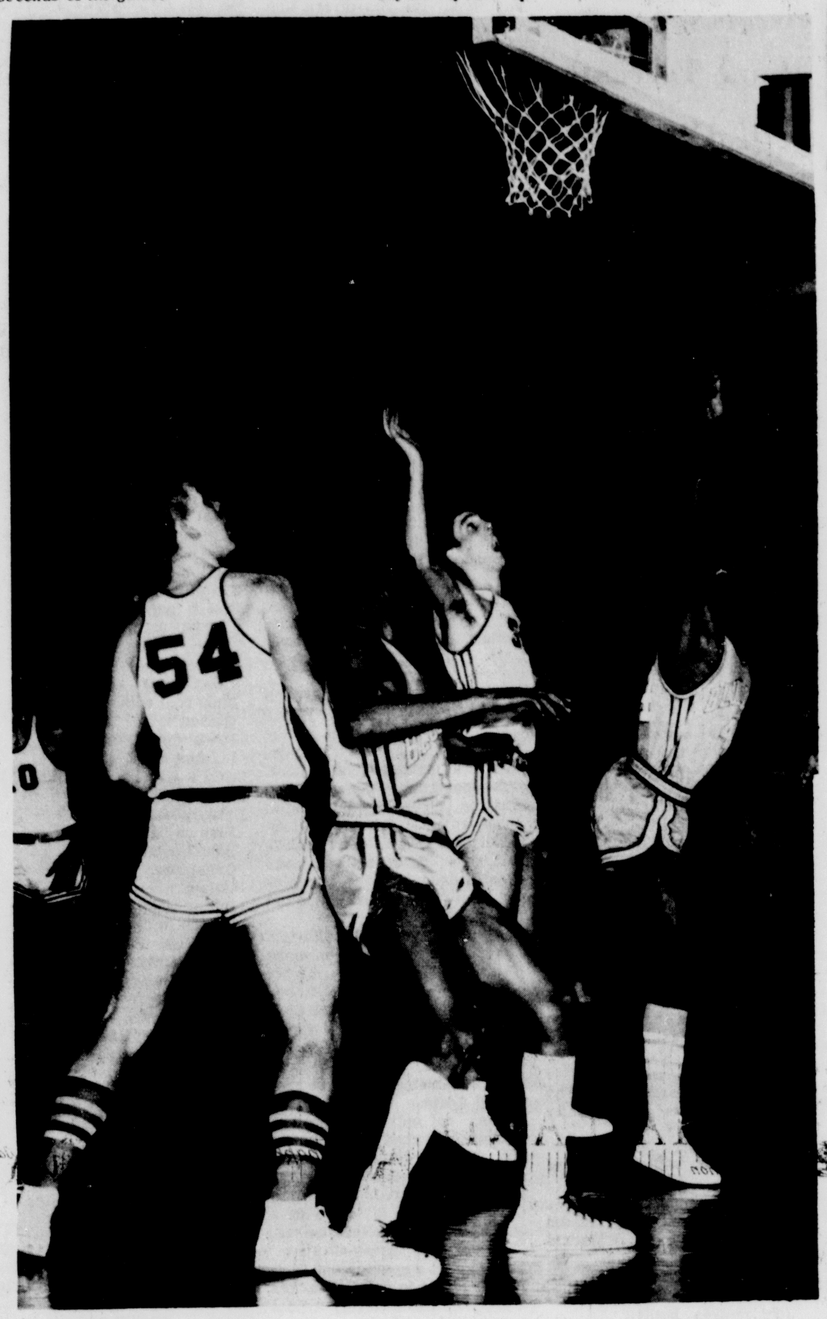

It was just too much Faerber

Things began going for Lindbergh early in the third quarter as the Flyers opened up an 11-point lead, 39-28, in three minutes and 45 seconds. Before one knew it the lead had been extended to 18 points with 27 seconds to go in the period.

Lindbergh's defense tightened and its offense began moving as the brothers combined for 44 points, with George scoring 25 and Ken hitting 19, and 36 rebounds, pulling 23 and 13 respectively.

Westley Unseld Unanimous Choice For All-Mo. Valley

KANSAS CITY (AP) — All America Westley Unseld, top rebounder in the history of the Missouri Valley Conference and best all-around big man ever to play in the league, is the only unanimous choice on the Associated Press 1967 all-conference basketball team.

Unseld was a first-team choice on all 56 ballots.

Six-foot Eldridge Webb of Tulsa, a dangerous scorer and superb playmaker, missed unanimous selection by only three ballots.

Bradley's 6-6 Joe Allen, termed "the best one-legged player in the country" by coach Joe Swank of Tulsa, and Louisville's gifted 6-3 sophomore, Butch Beard, were solid first-team choices with 37 votes apiece.

The fifth spot went to Rubin Russell of North Texas, only senior on the team and a two-time Valley scoring champion. He nudged Wichita's Jamie Thompson by four votes and Wichita's Warren Armstrong by seven.

"Westley is the complete basketball player," says his coach, Peck Hickman. "He does everything very well-rebound shooting, passing and defense. Above all, he is a great team man. He could score 30-35 a game if he wanted to. But he's happy just to get 'em when we need 'em. He's certainly in the same class with Oscar Robertson and Jerry Lucas."

As a 13-year-old eighth grader, Unseld went out for basketball and was cut from the squad after two days. This didn't stop him.

"I decided if my older brother George (later a star at Kansas could do it, then I'd do it, or bust trying," Unseld says.

Webb was ruled scholastically ineligible at mid-term last year.

"Since then Eldridge has completely changed his outlook and attitude," his coach said.

Webb led Tulsa to an NIT bid and a surprise second-place finish.

Allen's left leg carries a lot of scar tissue, but he makes up for it with anticipation of plays, knowledge and concentration. He led the Valley in all-games scoring at 22.8 and in field shooting at .622 and was the No. 5 all-games rebounder with an 11.8 average.

"Joe has more desire than any player I've ever had," said Joe Stowell, the Bradley coach.

Beard survived the tremendous pressure of a pre-season buildup and produced better than a 20-point average. Despite his slim build, he grabbed about eight rebounds a game and improved on defense.

Russell is a deadly gunner who often kept his team in the game with consecutive point sprees ranging up to 17. Opponents set their defenses for him, but he shook loose and helped NTS to its best season in years.

Thompson and Armstrong were joined on the second team by 7-foot Rich Niemann of St. Louis, 6-9 Bob Netolicky of Drake and 6-9 Rick Roberson of Cincinnati.

Jays Fall in State Tourney

Lindbergh's Faerber Brothers Dominate Game

BY RON JAYNES

ST. LOUIS - What advantage do signs have on a basketball game? Well...One would think not any...that is toward the game, but last night at Washington University field house where the quarterfinal round of the Missouri class L basketball tournament was held... one sign stood out among all of the 17 strung from the balcony...that one read "Sic 'em George"....That phrase only meant the Flyers' All-Stater from last season, George Faerber.

The Flyers and Faerber smashed Charleston's defense and corraled its offense in taking a 77-46 victory that ended the Jays' victory streak at 19 and stretched their own to 19.

George wasted little time in proving to the Charleston fans and others in the gymnasium that he is considered one of the best players in the state.

As the 6-4, 215-pound postman opened the game he got the tip and then hit a six-foot shot to start the scoring and send him on his way to 25 points and 23 rebounds.

The Charleston quintet was bidding for its 20th consecutive victory, its 24th triumph and its first state tournament semi-final berth in the history of the school.

Lindbergh had no weak spots. If they had the Blue Jays failed to spot them as the Jays tried everything to stop the Flyers' scoring machine. Coach Gary Wadlington said; "We used a man to man, we doubled and triple-teamed him, used a zone and we still couldn't stop him."

Two negative factors defeated the Jays, their shooting and their rebounding. Lindbergh hit 29 of 68 field goals and pulled 59 rebounds while Charleston connected on 17 of 58 and collected only 31 rebounds.

Both squads opened with a man to man defense with Charleston sagging back off the guards on big George.

As the game opened, each squad exchanged baskets until George hit a bucket with 2:11 left in the first period and drew a foul that he hit for an 11-8 lead. The Flyers never trailed again.

Faerber continued to draw fouls as Charleston was forced to come out on the guards after Jim Gannaway hit three straight buckets from 20 feet out, when they came out George went in and sent his team into a 15-8 first period lead.

Somewhat surprising to Charleston fans was that Lindbergh possessed good speed and used a fast break against the Jays in the second period that caught them flat footed. The performance sent the Flyers into an early 21-16 lead with 3:51 remaining in the half.

Three obstacles Charleston had to overcome when the second half started were planted in everyone's mind. (1) The Jays needed to rebound if they were to win, (2) They needed to get back on defense and (3) perhaps the most unlikely of all, was to stop big George...

After a timeout with a little more than two minutes to go in the period, three buckets by Charleston's Betts cut a 27-18 lead to 27-24 at the half. Betts hit three 25 footers to put his team back in the game as the Flyers seemed to be pulling away.

Halftime statistics showed Charleston hitting on only 12 of 31 field goal attempts while Lindbergh hit 10 of 29 and the Flyers scored on seven of 10 free throws and collected 20 rebounds compared to Charleston's zero for one at the line and 16 rebounds. George had 11 of the Flyers' rebounds at the half and brother, Ken, pulled six. Brown topped the Jays with six and Jones was credited with five.

Charleston had only one free throw opportunity up to the half while Lindbergh was charged with two fouls, one offensive and one defensive. Charleston drew 7 fouls.

The final period was a repeat of the third quarter. Charleston was unable to get back into the ball game and fell back 23 points before putting in subs for the last two minutes and 53 seconds of the game.

Charleston's cheering squad stayed right down to the last second and showed good sportsmanship as it congratulated the players for getting as far as they did.

It was just too much Faerber Things began going for Lindbergh early in the third quarter as the Flyers opened up an 11-point lead, 39-28, in three minutes and 45 seconds. Before one knew it the lead had been extended to 18 points with 27 seconds to go in the period.

Lindbergh's defense tightened and its offense began moving as the brothers combined for 44 points, with George scoring 25 and Ken hitting 19, and 36 rebounds, pulling 23 and 13 respectively.

Ruben Brown and Gary Betts were the Jays' leading scorers. They hit 17 and 16 points.

Study for Freedom

Dr. Kershner

WE welcome the opening of the Freedom Study Center in Boston, Virginia about eighty miles southeast of Washington, D. C. The purpose is to turn out graduates "who know as much of the tactics and strategy of communism as prospective admirals know of the tactics and strategy of naval warfare." We are grateful that competent men and women have planned this enterprise and carried it through to a successful beginning. The property consists of 671 acres and an impressive old stone mansion.

It is hoped that those patriots who are planning the studies will put proper emphasis on moral and spiritual values. There can be no freedom without voluntary loyalty to the moral law of God. If men will not follow the moral ideals supremely expressed by the Christian religion, there is no hope of maintaining freedom and free self-government, for the strong will find ways of exploiting the weak, resulting in a master and slave relationship. Unless men adhere voluntarily to the high ethical ideals of truthfulness, honesty, generosity and good will toward others, and refrain from coveting, stealing and mistreating their fellows, free government becomes impossible.

These ideals are taught by the moral codes growing out of religious faith. They lie in the spiritual compartment of the lives of men and women, and they govern their physical actions. Let us never forget William Penn's great words, "If men will not be governed by God then they must be governed by tyrants."

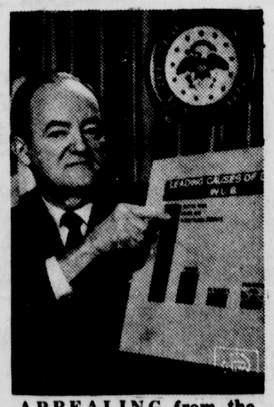

To pacifists and their sympathizers who believe that if we disarm and are good and kind to our implacable foe, communism, he will be won from the error of his way, and will accept peaceable coexistence, we commend a careful consideration of the following quotation from Professor Karl Brandt of the Hoover Institution. Professor Brandt made this statement in an address before the Annual Institute on World Affairs at San Diego, California, August 18, 1966: "If historical experience means anything at all, it gives almost certain assurance (and not the slightest evidence to the contrary) that certain men who have the power to initiate war as the means to expand their orbit of command will do so when they consider the chances favorable, irrespective of the possible risk of total self destruction."

Foreign Policy Viewpoints Reflect Party Differences

(NOTE: This is the fourth in a continuing series of reports on public opinion and attitudes in Missouri. The reports are based on periodic surveys conducted by the Public Opinion Survey Unit of the Research Center, School of Business and Public Administration, University of Missouri, Columbia. Because of careful sampling techniques, findings summarized in these reports accurately represent feelings among the adult Missouri populace.)

COLUMBIA -- The argument is oftentimes made that the United States should present a united front in all its dealings with foreign countries. Some people say that while domestic policy differences are tolerable, the country can ill afford dissension over foreign policy. Others say that while people may express different opinions on foreign policy, once the President and Congress commit the nation to a certain policy, it should be supported whole-heartedly. But critics of these viewpoints claim that, in a democracy, free and open discussion of conflicting policies must be permitted at all times; otherwise, they say, our policies cannot be adjusted to changing world situations.

There has always been considerable pressure for a bipartisan foreign policy in the United States. Critics of the existing foreign policy, particularly when they raise questions about our military commitments, are often held suspect.

Regardless of the attempt to present a united front, popular viewpoints on appropriate foreign policies do differ. Generally these differences appear in regional and party allignments.

In an effort to discover whether such regional and party differences existed in Missouri, the Public Opinion Survey Unit of the University of Missouri asked a sample of nearly 1,000 adult Missourians whether our commitment in a number for foreign policy areas should be "increased, decreased or stay as it is."

Responses are presented in the accompanying table. The closer the figure comes to 1.00, the more an increase is desired. The closer the figure comes to 0.00, the more a decrease in commitment is desired. A score of .50 indicates that the present level of comitment is satisfactory The table presents figures for adult residents of Missouri's ten Congressional districts.

First	.34	.37	.50	.58
Second	.21	.45	.49	.56
Third	.32	.36	.48	.58
Fourth	.27	.32	.51	.54
Fifth	.37	.37	.61	.58
Sixth	.27	.31	.52	.52
Seventh	.22	.20	.47	.53
Eighth	.23	.35	.59	.56
Ninth	.28	.33	.56	.57
Tenth	.33	.31	.50	.54

A nation has several instruments available for conducting its foreign policy. One of these is economic and military aid, or as it is commonly called, "foreign aid." Missourians in all Congressional districts desire a reduction in our foreign aid in the suburban St. Louis 2nd district represented by Richard Ichord, a Democrat.

National prestige is also a tool of foreign policy. Apart from scientific considerations, America's space exploration program is said to involve us in a race for prestige with the Soviet Union. But Missourians in all districts also prefer a reduction in this program. Congressman Hall's 7th district again is most opposed to the program, while Congressman Curtis' 2nd district offers the least opposition to it. Perhaps the importance of the space industry to suburban St. Louis' economy is reflected in this vewpoint.

Military power is another important instrument in foreign policy. On this issue Missourians in all districts slightly favor an increase over our present commitment. Regional and party differences on defense spending are almost non-existent, although voters in the urban districts are slightly more inclined to favor increases than are voters in rural districts.

When the issue shifts to the use of military power in a specific area -- Vietnam -- Missourians' viewpoints begin to differ a little bit more. While most districts will settle for the status quo in Viet Nam, Kansas City's 5th district represented by Richard Bolling, a Democrat, and Richard Ichord's 8th district, tend to favor increased military involvement. The other districts hold roughly similar viewpoints regardless of party or region.

Among the general public in Missouri, then, regional and, to a lesser extent, party differences are more pronounced on non-military foreign affairs than on matters of national defense.

Foreign Policy Viewpoints Reflect Party Differences

Perhaps the importance of the space industry to suburban St. Louis' economy is reflected in this vewpoint.

Military power is another important instrument in foreign policy. On this issue Missourians in all districts slightly favor an increase over our present commitment. Regional and party differences on defense spending are almost non-existent, although voters in the urban districts are slightly more inclined to favor increases than are voters in rural districts.

When the issue shifts to the use of military power in a specific area -- Vietnam -- Missourians' viewpoints begin to differ a little bit more. While most districts will settle for the status quo in Viet Nam, Kansas City's 5th district represented by Richard Bolling, a Democrat, and Richard Ichord's 8th district, tend to favor increased military involvement. The other districts hold roughly similar viewpoints regardless of party or region.

Among the general public in Missouri, then, regional and, to a lesser extent, party differences are more pronounced on non-military foreign affairs than on matters of national defense.

Toy Chain Plans Baby Boy Doll

NEW YORK (AP) - A major toy store chain disclosed it would introduce a baby boy doll in the United States. It indicated it expected the anatomically realistic doll to arouse controversy.

"The doll is in no way intended to arouse anxiety," said Frank Caplan, general manager of Creative Playthings, the toy store chain. "We're not trying to shock anyone. We think it will help parents answer a child's questions in a methodical way. We think it is a healthy approach."

The doll, the first of its kind, is a 3-pound, 21-inch sleepy-eyed blond named Little Brother. It comes in a diaper shirt and neither drinks nor wets. It will sell for about $17.

Two of the dolls are tucked away in rainbow-hued boxes under a counter in French exhibit at the 17th International Toy and Trade Fair here this week.

"It will not be officially exhibited because we feel it is one item which has to be promoted here in this country," said a spokesman for the French exhibit.

The doll has been on sale in Europe for about a year.

House Sends Obscene Call Bill Forward

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) - The House moved a bill toward passage that would make obscene, harassing and abusing phone calls illegal. The sponsor, Rep. Thomas A. Walsh, D-St. Louis, said that upon complaint of an individual to the phone company the origin of the call could be traced and this would provide a tool for prosecution.

He said the telephone company does not use a listening device and doesn't monitor calls.

"If they did I would never sponsor the bill," Walsh said.

Another bill that moved ahead in the House would set up a Missouri safety commission with members of state department and the legislature serving and in addition would provide for a 12-member advisory board. It was sponsored by Rep. Carl H. Niewhoehner, D-Columbia.

A bill by Rep. Henry Ross, D-Kansas City that would remove the fine provision for conviction of carrying a concealed weapon was moved forward after several attempts to amend it. Ross said "this bill simply provides for time instead of a fine for people convicted."

The minimum term would be 50 days with a maximum of up to five years. Jail time would be automatic.

Rep. James E. Spain, D-Bloomfield, presented a bill to include not-for-profit non-denominational hospitals under the $10,000 memorial grant from the state for construction in addition to county hospitals which are now eligible for the grant.

It was amended to raise the amount to $25,000 for all coming under the provision and moved forward toward passage.

In a second batch of new House bills were ones to:

Allow adjoining states to enter into compacts for the regulation of air pollution.

There Is No Peace

Sir:

Americans have never been less united, perhaps, in the history of our wonderful country. The dis-unity that exists is not fundamental; its taproot is in semantics. One illustration of this is seen in the confusion that arises from the changed concept of war and the failure to redefine this term so that all understand the new form it has assumed. The popular notion of war remains armed conflict between sovereign states from which it follows that we are at peace until the shooting starts.

The new concept of war is total. It is not limited to military armaments. It is prosecuted with every conceivable means to defeat and conquer the antagonist. This includes deceit and subversion by corrupting the morals and the morale of a society. These are the acknowledged weapons of our enemy. His leaders have proudly proclaimed this, and there is an accumulation of documented evidence to show that our enemy has been and is employing these weapons against us from without and from within. By his actions, therefore, we are already in war without our consent. When this is recognized and acknowledged we shall cease our deluding discussions about how to maintain the peace and shall be actively at war to restore the peace.

Wars are either won or lost, or end in temporary stalemate. It is difficult to imagine many Americans who would be willing to lose any kind of war. The suspicion insinuates itself, however, that some confuse stalemate with peaceful coexistence and are willing to rest their hopes on this. Our enemy pays lip service to peaceful coexistence as one of his pieces of deceit wherewith to subvert us, but for him stalemate is only an interlude in his war to conquer us. We have his word for it, "We will bury you."

Once the modern concept of war is understood, Americans will be, as always, united on fundamentals. In this unity lies not only our strength to survive but also to lead a weary world to genuine peace, which can result only when "goodwill toward men" is in the ascendancy. But to say "peace, peace," when there is no peace, can end only in disappointment and worse - in subjection to those who love neither our God nor our nation...

DRUGS

The President's recent message to Congress on Consumer Protection failed to offer the American public protection against inefficient, poorly advised and many say, tyrannically oppressive, actions of power-mad federal government regulatory agencies. Many of these agencies have not in the past, and are not currently acting to protect the interests of the consumers, rich or poor, healthy or ill.

May I point out the dismal failure of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to promote the welfare of the sick American. The department's division of Food and Drug Administration has prevented numerous new drugs from reaching the market to cure or relieve the sick, has added materially to the costs of marketing current prescription drugs and has failed to make any of our currently used drugs any safer, any cheaper, or any more efficient in curing or relieving the sick.

Recent ruling of the F.D.A. have effectively blocked the marketing of a cortisone type drug that, rubbed on the skin, relieves inflammatory skin diseases far better than has been possible in years gone by. The generic name of the drug is triamcinolone acetonide powder. The drug was given the name Kenalog Crystals by E. R. Squibb and Sons, the company credited with the original research and development.

In 1961, soon after research development of the basic active drug, Squibb filed a new drug application with the new Food and Drug Administration to release the drug in powdered pure drug form for use in prescription compounding as has been the customary method of releasing a new drug discovery in the past. Unfortunately, the President and Congress permit the F.D.A. to discard past procedures and precedents for recently promulgated (by the F.D.A.) guidelines - represented to have the force of laws. Squibb was notified that the application was rejected as it was not accompanied by adequate proof that Kenalog Crystals were safe, stable, and efficient for compounding under all conditions and in all vehicles. As there are no limits to conditions a new drug may encounter and practically no end to the number and types of vehicles a new drug may be compounded with-the F.D.A.'s requirements are impossible to fulfill or satisfy. Squibb could only withdraw the application - in 1962.

Since 1962 Squibb and Lederle Drug Cos. have placed with the Food and Drug Administration numerous new drug applications containing triamcinolone acetonide powder. More than 20 drug products are on the market with this drug as the active ingredient. Estimating that each new drug application was marketed at an average cost of $5 million (to satisfy the involved testing requirements). $100 million were added to the costs of research and development of this drug before the drug could be widely marketed. (And still the most useful form of the drug for compounding cannot reach the market.

What has this done to consumers of the drug?

The drug has been released in compressed tablets to be swallowed, and in water suspension to be injected, and in a number of ointments, creams, and solutions to be rubbed and sprayed on the skin, and dropped in the eyes. As a result of its release in the water suspension your physician has been ordering the pharmacist to withdraw the wet suspension and compound the drug with any vehicle appropriate to soothe the inflammed linings of his patients. This procedure is a way around the F.D.A.'s ridiculous blocking ruling that the drug can be marketed wet but not dry.

R. C. Martin says:

The American people should never allow themselves to be brain washed by a philosophy that war is an instrument of necessity, and that it should be used as an implement to stimulate lagging economies. Neither is it necessary for social progress.

There can be justification, however stimulating to economies or glorying in victories, to the inhuman, horrifying acts and deeds of war.

Shining victories, won medals though heroic the deed, can never heal the wound nor hide the scares, nor erase the sorry caused by these horrible and unnecessary wars.

If man cannot rise to higher heights and more noble causes then the dedication of total destruction to his fellow creation, God help us all! For at some heated moment someone will trigger the heathenistic temper of some glory-seeking war-monger, then the dust of humanity shall sing among the "Radio Active" ruins of what was supposedly once a civilized world.

We lose our life when we lose our innocence; we are dead when we are guilty; we are in hell when we are in shame. Death does not take a long time to come; it comes in the very day of our sin, "in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die."

Justification cannot come in the name of justice. Victories cannot be claimed by the number of enemy dead, nor by the amount of American blood that runs down crooked streams, in the far-away war-torn jungles of other nations.

It is my strong feeling that war cannot be justified - war is against the laws of God. God would never put His approval upon this system of mass murder. In the Bible death only came as a judgement and no nation has the authority to judge another nation in this fashion.

In this moment of history when starvation claims more lives than the cruel wars themselves, when millions upon millions of starving human beings are living in slums, a living hell of deprivation of even the barest of necessities, can our world rationally afford this great waste of war?

Can any nation regardless of her natural resources intelligently afford the time, can it afford the cost in human lives, can it afford the hellish decan it afford the hellish devastating destruction that al- of ignorance. I say, acts of ignorance because they are proving nothing more.

No nation can look with pride, at long rows of white crosses and feel justified regardless of its claim on high and noble causes, for in war there is no justification.

The blood of those who lie so silent and still, beneath the white crosses that mark the final resting place, of brave and precious boys and gallant men, would cry out, if it were possible, there is no justification here.

Look, if you will, across bloody battle fields, see what you can. Look hard and long, stand there for a moment an hour if you are brave enough. What do you see? Are you getting sick? How does your heart feel? What is that running down your cheeks? Tears, warm tears of course. You cry out, "my God, can there be justification here!"

Look across "Pearl Harbor" look slowly, see great ships lying half sunk: see those that become solemn tombs for brave American boys. Look into the blue Hawaiian skies, see the enemy planes screaming down dropping death, hell, and destruction; hear the cries of brave men caught in suprise; smell death everywhere. Wait just for a moment. Now, tell me what you think. Is there any justification here? None!

You may search through the writings of all the great men of the world, you may explore the minds of all known philosophers, you may scan diligently through the sacred pages of God's Word, yet honest men can find no justification for these horrible and meaningless acts and deeds of war.

Peaceful hearts long for peace; peace can come, and will come when men are willing to listen to Him who came to give us peace on earth and good will toward men.

R. C. Martin

MEN WANTED

Of squeamish-minded men
I want to have no part,
And men with priggish views
So niggardly at heart.
For pygamy - minded men
Embracing midget goals
Squelch all the faith from one
Just as they blight all souls.
Of stingy - minded men
My weary heart is tiring;
O God give us big men
Great - hearted and inspiring.

The Total Look Counts when Easter Comes Early

And Easter does come early this year . . . Sunday, March 26th . . . with still a crisp, coolness in the air that calls for the total look of the ensemble outfit. And we've collected the best of the lot from the pages of the fashion magazines. What's more . . . they're so sensible. Wear the dress alone . . . wear the outfit . . . wear the coat as a lightweight top coat. Wear them from dawn to dusk . . . even into the night.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE DRAMATIC HUSBAND

Whenever Dave found that he was losing an argument with his wife, he'd dramatically stomp out of the room with the pronouncement that he was going to commit suicide. His mood always determined the mode. He'd either take along a gun to plug himself, or find a rope to choke himself or uncork a bottle to poison himself.

On all such occasions, Dave's wife would follow him out of the room and plead with him not to do anything foolish. That is, except for one occasion when she stayed behind and nonchalantly continued to read a newspaper.

Finding himself in the basement with no one pleading with him, Dave began to tap on a rafter to make sure his wife knew where he was. When it struck him that she had no intention of coming to his rescue, he put down his rifle and dejected went to bed. The next morning, he was rejected. His wife sued to end their marriage on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

His threats of suicide, she complained to the judge, "kept me on edge for years and I can't take it any more."

"Nonsense," was Dave's answer. "I was never cruel to her. I was always very considerate. As for my inclination towards suicide, if I ever carried it out I wouldn't be hurting her, only myself."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you bust the coupling?

This is how the judge ruled: He sided for Dave's wife. In doing so, he held that Dave deliberately impaired his wife's emotional and physical health by repeatedly threatening suicide.

"It was obvious," the judge concluded in effect, "tha Dave would never have commited suicide unless he coul have done it without killing himself."

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest the tragic and hilarious expressions both for and against the Wall Street Warriors. No one came up with an answer. Not even the great Ann Landers.

I have a practical solution for money-hungry egomaniacs who are too tired for love. I hope that you have enough courage to print it. Today we have Medicare, and here in Wisconsin we are trying Judicare - a plan which entitles the underprivileged to legal aid.

Why not set up a government-supported agency called Sexicare? This agency could relieve the tensions of the overworked husband and the underloved wife. Sexicare would be looked upon not as a recreation, but as a mental measure. Preventive medicine, if you please. No emotional involvement, no guilt, no broken marriages with half-orphaned children and the murderous alimony hook. Just instant relief for the needy.

With someone like you behind the program, Ann Landers, it would be an overnight success - FRIEND OF MANKIND

Dear Friend: When you get a congressman to sponsor this phony bill, let me know. And then we'll talk.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the man who is now 55 and has never enjoyed life because he has always been worried about dying. He blames his father (who was a hypochondriac) and will continue to blame him as long as he lives.

Please, Ann Landers, tell people to quit blaming their parents for their inadequacies and failures. Tell them to accept responsibility for themselves. Most parents make mistakes simply because they are ignorant or fearful. If outside help is needed to face life, people ought to drag their carcasses to the nearest psychiatrist and begin the struggle for maturity and self-understanding.

To sit around and blame one's parents for 55 years is nonsense. Pass this word, will you please? - GROWN UP

Dear Up: Consider it passed. And now may I add a word of my own? We are all the products of our upbringing, but thousands of people rise above poor upbringing and they achieve splendid victories against tremendous odds. If you don't belive me, just look around.

Dear Ann Landers: Please do a million mothers a favor and print something to make American fathers get up during the night when a new baby needs attention.

My husband is very helpful until bedtime, but once he turns in for the night he refuses to get up for anything.

When my last baby was born, my obstetrician told me to take it easy for three weeks. I asked my husband to give the baby her 4:00 A.M. bottle and he said, "I need my rest at night. You can nap during the daytime."

How about an assist from you, Ann Landers? - EXHAUSTED MOM

Dear Exhausted: I'll be in your corner - for three weeks after you come home from the hospital. After that I'm going into your husband's corner.

Some husbands are living dolls about getting up at night - and lucky is the wife whose husband is a willing nocturnal helper. But a woman CAN nap during the daytime if she must. If a man needs an uninterrupted night's sleep to function properly, he should have it.

To solve some of the frustrations, disappointments and disillusionments of married life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "What to Expect from Marriage," enclosing with your request 20¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"Seek not the favor of the multitude; it is seldom got by honest and lawful means."

all kinds, and gem diamonds make up 90 per cent of its production. Diamonds are mined in a concession along the coast northward from Orangemund and recovered from gravel dredged up from the sea bottom.

At Tsumeb in the north, U.S. interests run one of the largest base metal mines in the world. The territory exports a lot of lead, copper, zinc and vanadium. But taxes do not cover all its budget, and South African subsidy is necessary.

A white-only legislative assembly levies the taxes and adopts the budget. A long-established mixed-blood community called the Basters of the Rehoboth Gebiet has local self-government. Other mixed bloods have an advisory council working with the South African territorial administrator.

South Africa retains control of defense, foreign affairs, police and many other matters and has almost absolute authority over the native reserves. State President Charles Robberts Swart has the title of paramount chief of all the Africans in the territory and can move them around at will.

Vietnamese coastal installations in one of the most active days since the Navy began hitting land targets in the North on Feb. 26.

Although the ships sliced close to the coast for attacks all along the southern panhandle of North Vietnam, no coastal fire was met and Navy guns bombarded a series of supply points, suspected gun positions and surface - to - air - missile sites.

B52 bombers also maintained the intensified pace with four raids in South Vietnam in the past 24 hours. With each plane unloading some 60,000 pounds of bombs, the giant bombers made raids in four separate provinces.

THE ART OF BEING

The art of being is the assumption that you may possess this very minute, those qualities of spirit and attitudes of mind that make for radiant living.

It is a philosophy of being today, instead of becoming in a tomorrow that never comes.

It is recognizing that courage, joy, serenity, faith, hope and love are immediately available now, and proceeding to open yourself so these qualities can be expressed through you in everyday living.

It is following the maxim of Shakespeare: "Assume a virtue though you have it not"... knowing that the dynamic power of habit can build it into your character.

It is being great now, being forgiving now, being tolerant now, being happy now, being successful now, instead of postponing positive and constructive living to some vague and indefinite future.

It is knowing that when we move into the future it becomes the now, and that now is the appointed time!

It is facing the fact that your biggest task is not to get ahead of others, but to surpass yourself.

It is wasting no time dreaming about the rich life you may live next year, or ten years from now; it is beginning to live at your best right now, today.

It is heeding the wisdom of the ancient Chinese seer who observed: "A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step," and it is taking that step today.

It is beginning today to be the man you want to be.

It is seeking and discovering the acres of diamonds in each day.

It is enlarging the now by pouring into it, intense creative energy.

It is immortalizing the present moment that your life may have eternal significance.

It is coming into a full realization that the Master voiced the secret of victorious being, when He declared that the Kingdom of God is not afar off, but that it is within you now!

Curtis Discounts GOP Role in Coalition

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Thomas B. Curtis says there's a coalition working in Congress, all right, but it isn't the often-cited combine of Republicans and southern Democrats.

Instead, the Missouri Republican told his constituents in a newletter, it is "the Northern Democrat-Southern Democrat coalition, styling itself a political party."

Curtis said the alleged Republican - Southern Democrat coalition is represented as the villain in such matters as failure of a Washington Home Rule bill. But he said Democrats of all varieties united "to re-elect John McMillan of South Carolina chairman of the House District of Columbia Committee, graveyard of this legislation, and stacked the committee with a ration of 10 Southern Democrats to seven non-Southerners."

all kinds, and gem diamonds make up 90 per cent of its production. Diamonds are mined in a concession along the coast northward from Orangemund and recovered from gravel dredged up from the sea bottom.

At Tsumeb in the north, U.S. interests run one of the largest base metal mines in the world. The territory exports a lot of lead, copper, zinc and vanadium. But taxes do not cover all its budget, and South African subsidy is necessary.

A white-only legislative assembly levies the taxes and adopts the budget. A long-established mixed-blood community called the Basters of the Rehoboth Gebiet has local self-government. Other mixed bloods have an advisory council working with the South African territorial administrator.

South Africa retains control of defense, foreign affairs, police and many other matters and has almost absolute authority over the native reserves. State President Charles Robberts Swart has the title of paramount chief of all the Africans in the territory and can move them around at will.

Vietnamese coastal installations in one of the most active days since the Navy began hitting land targets in the North on Feb. 26.

Although the ships sliced close to the coast for attacks all along the southern panhandle of North Vietnam, no coastal fire was met and Navy guns bombarded a series of supply points, suspected gun positions and surface - to - air - missile sites.

B52 bombers also maintained the intensified pace with four raids in South Vietnam in the past 24 hours. With each plane unloading some 60,000 pounds of bombs, the giant bombers made raids in four separate provinces.

THE ART OF BEING

The art of being is the assumption that you may possess this very minute, those qualities of spirit and attitudes of mind that make for radiant living.

It is a philosophy of being today, instead of becoming in a tomorrow that never comes.

It is recognizing that courage, joy, serenity, faith, hope and love are immediately available now, and proceeding to open yourself so these qualities can be expressed through you in everyday living.

It is following the maxim of Shakespeare: "Assume a virtue though you have it not"... knowing that the dynamic power of habit can build it into your character.

It is being great now, being forgiving now, being tolerant now, being happy now, being successful now, instead of postponing positive and constructive living to some vague and indefinite future.

It is knowing that when we move into the future it becomes the now, and that now is the appointed time!

It is facing the fact that your biggest task is not to get ahead of others, but to surpass yourself.

It is wasting no time dreaming about the rich life you may live next year, or ten years from now; it is beginning to live at your best right now, today.

It is heeding the wisdom of the ancient Chinese seer who observed: "A journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step," and it is taking that step today.

It is beginning today to be the man you want to be.

It is seeking and discovering the acres of diamonds in each day.

It is enlarging the now by pouring into it, intense creative energy.

It is immortalizing the present moment that your life may have eternal significance.

It is coming into a full realization that the Master voiced the secret of victorious being, when He declared that the Kingdom of God is not afar off, but that it is within you now!

Curtis Discounts GOP Role in Coalition

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Thomas B. Curtis says there's a coalition working in Congress, all right, but it isn't the oftencited combine of Republicans and southern Democrats.

Instead, the Missouri Republican told his constituents in a newletter, it is "the Northern Democrat-Southern Democrat coalition, styling itself a political party."

Curtis said the alleged Republican - Southern Democrat coalition is represented as the villain in such matters as failure of a Washington Home Rule bill. But he said Democrats of all varieties united "to re-elect John McMillan of South Carolina chairman of the House District of Columbia Committee, graveyard of this legislation, and stacked the committee with a ration of 10 Southern Democrats to seven non-Southerners."
